Maddie case not being re-opened

Portugal's Attorney General has this week voiced his opinion that recent reports about British paedophile Raymond Hewlett, who became embroiled in the Madeleine McCann case after it emerged the former convict had been staying in the Algarve at the time of her disappearance, were not strong enough to re-open the case. ## Drink and drugs plaguing Portugal's future

As the Portuguese government prepares to approve a National Plan for Combating Alcoholism, drawn up by the Institute for Drugs and Drug Addictions (IDT), it has emerged that more people are seeking professional help for heroin addiction than alcoholism. (See Page 7)

Weekend weather

Lisbon: The weekend will start hot and humid in the capital, but Sunday is expected to be cloudy with a chance of showers in the morning and early afternoon. Faro: While the Algarve will be cloudy much of Sunday, the weekend is expected to be hot with UV ratings hitting 10 out of a maximum of 11 on Saturday. Oporto: The north will be one of the more comfortable places to be this weekend, with temperatures expected to reach maximums of around 24 or 25 degrees Celsius though minimums will be lower than they have been the past week.

Portugal shows Europe how it is done as it slashes road deaths by half in under a decade

ROAD DEATHS HALVED

Tourist taxes still on the table

Following last week's report on the possibility 'tourist taxes' (Algarve tourists to be taxed? – edition 1015, June 20th, 2009) this week Portimão Mayor Manuel da Luz has come forward to clarify that the possibility that tourists may be taxed to visit regional municipalities is "still no more than an idea", to be debated with world leading American marketing specialist, Philip Kotler.

"It is no more than an idea that I intend to discuss with one of the world's biggest specialists in marketing and it was in that sense that I originally spoke about it", said Mayor da Luz in response to a swift opposition from regional hoteliers and tourism associations.

Last Tuesday Manuel da Luz defended the need for a 'tourist tax' which would be re-injected in the Algarve's municipalities to counter-balance losses caused by drops in property transfer and council taxes, which in some municipalities have been significantly reduced due to the current financial crisis.

He said that his intention at present was not to tax tourists, and that "only ill intentions from an unimaginative opposition could transform an idea into a consummated fact".

GDP set to shrink 4.5% this year - OECD report

Portugal's GDP will contract by 4.5 percent this year and 0.5 percent in 2010, the Organisation for Economic Cooperation and Development (OECD) said Wednesday in its quarterly world economic outlook.

The OECD predictions for Portugal's economic contraction are worse than those of the Lisbon Government (3.4 percent) and the European Commission (3.7 percent). The Paris-based think-tank also warns that Portugal's budget deficit will increase by 0.8 percent this year due to Government stimulus measures.

A sharp fall in economic activity will reduce tax revenues and send Portugal's budget gap

Nevertheless, the Mayor did confirm it was his intention to discuss the matter with Philip Kotler, considered by many as 'the father' of marketing and a key speaker at the International Marketing Places Conference which took place this week in Portimão.

During this week's meeting Philip Kotler suggested Portimão creates a city marketing agency, made up of a multi-disciplined team of professionals capable of creating 'silver bullets' that will draw the world's attention to a particular city by marketing individual monuments or places of interest.

As an example of the success that this strategy entails Philip Kotler made reference to the city of Bilbao, Northern Spain, whose main attraction is its Guggenheim Museum and whose "building is up above six percent in 2009 and 2010, said the OECD's regular economic health check.

Portugal's jobless rate will be around 9.2 percent this year and climb to 11.2 percent in 2010, the report added. "Restrictive credit conditions, a rapidly weakening labour market and low levels of consumer confidence will drive down consumption", said the OECD in its chapter on Portugal.

almost more interesting than the works exhibited therein".

In response to the 'tourist tax' suggestion that was first reported last week, Elidérico Viegas, chief of AHETA (Association of Algarve Hotels and Resorts) was quoted as telling Lusa news agency, "At a time when the level of competition between destinations is high and when there is a drop in demand, launching this idea is completely absurd and lacking in sense". According to AHETA, it is not the value being charged which is the problem, rather the negative impact such a tax would have on the image of the region.

Unsettled summer predicted

While other European and American meteorological experts have proclaimed this summer will be one of intense heat throughout the whole of Europe, their Italian counterparts have begged to differ after carrying out a study for the President of that country in which it was concluded that European weather this summer would be hit and miss affair.

According to the Italian specialists this summer will not be a stable one weather-wise, with some days of intense heat, others being significantly cooler, with strong winds, choppy seas and spells of rain.

However, Portuguese weather experts have preferred to remain out of the debate, reserving judgment for when the time comes, claiming any prediction beyond 10 days "is not reliable".

This was stated by the President of the National Meteorology and Geophysics Institute, Adérito Serrão, who explained "It is not possible to preview with certainty, for two or three months from now, the weather for Portugal. The most we can see is tendencies, which we will not broadcast, as any tendency could change". An opinion shared by agro-meteorologist João Mello e Abreu, who said "Any forecast that goes beyond five days can be wrong".

Adérito Serrão also said "Given the present day and age's climate, nothing is abnormal, because climate change that has been verified on a global scale also influences the Iberian Peninsula, particularly Portugal. Therefore people must be prepared for worsening phenomenon, like heatwaves, heavy rainfall and chill winds".

Royal Algarve visit

It has emerged that Prince Edward, Earl of Essex's visit to the Algarve this weekend, during which he is to attend a Duke of Edinburgh Cup charity event, is in fact being fully financed by millionaire property developer André Jordan. Mr Jordan is said to be paying for the Prince to fly on a private jet from the UK to the Algarve, to be present at the official opening of the tycoon's latest luxury development 'The Residences at Victoria Golf Club'.

Recent reports not enough to re-open Maddie case - Attorney General

Portugal's Attorney General has this week voiced its opinion that recent reports about British paedophile Raymond Hewlett, who was embroiled in the Madeleine McCann after it emerged the former convict had been staying in the Algarve at the time of her disappearance, were not strong enough to re-open the case.

Following reports in the UK's press that branded 64-year-old Hewlett as 'suspicious' for being in the Algarve region at the time of Madeleine McCann's disappearance, Portugal's Attorney General has said none of the reports offered solid facts that justified re-launching the investigation.

At the time of then three-year-old Madeleine McCann's disappearance from an apartment in the Praia da Luz 'Ocean Club' resort, Hewlett was staying in Tavira, Eastern Algarve, around an hour's drive from where the McCann family were lodged.

In a statement the Atto-ney General's Office made clear "speculation, opinions or commentary is not enough to re-open the investigation".

It continued "when there are concrete facts, that the magistrates in charge of the case consider relevant or credible, the case will be reopened".

The Attorney General did, however, confirm it was "paying full attention to all signs that show up".

Reports in British newspaper the Daily Mail told of how ex-soldier Hewlett had a past of known attacks carried out on young girls and which dated back to 1972. That year he was sent to prison for abusing a 12-year-old girl.

Prince Edward will reportedly stay in Vilamoura's five-star Tivoli Hotel, where Presidential Suites cost over €3,000 a night.

As well as private flights to and from the Algarve with charter company Netjets, which are believed to be costing Jordan an estimated €26,000, the Royal will also be given the keys to an apartment at The Residences development, which start at €494,000. It is thought the property is a gift that will be used to raise revenue for the Duke of Edinburgh International Award Foundation. Reports suggest the keys will be handed over during an informal luncheon ceremony at which the Portuguese Duke of Braganza, along with an array of other prominent businessmen, public figures and Residence owners, will also be present.

Also said to be on the agenda for Prince Edward, who is currently seventh in line to the thrones of 16 countries, was a visit to the São Lourenço International School on Friday morning, to meet a group of children taking part in the Portuguese affiliate of The Duke of Edinburgh Award project.

Mr. Jordan, who claims he has "known Prince Edward for 20 years and met him countless times", has denied accusations that the Prince's visit is a publicity stunt to promote his latest development, which is said to have suffered setbacks due to the crisis. The Residences, which overlook the Victoria Golf course, were initially expected to open last year.

But a property consultant working for Mr. Jordan's firm contradicted the tycoon, telling an undercover Daily Mail reporter the opposite, being quoted as saying "We gave an apartment to charity, to the Duke of Edinburgh's Award, so that is why he is coming. To receive a key and also for... for... well, it's good marketing".

The Duke of Edinburgh Cup will take place at the Victoria Golf Club, in Vilamoura, over the weekend of 26th to 28th June, 2009. It is a charity golf tournament which uses participation fees to fund projects for vulnerable young people. Meanwhile a press release to The Portugal Tournament, competing for The Duke of Edinburgh Cup, at the Victoria course is fully subscribed. In the evening guests have been invited to a Gala Dinner with prize giving ceremony, to be held at the new Tivoli Victoria Hotel, located next to The Residences reception".

Earlier this week Liberal Democrat MP Norman Baker spoke out against the Royal's visit to the Algarve, which has been dubbed a 'Rent-a-Royal' affair, by saying "The proper role of the Royal Family is to represent the country. It is not to work for foreign nationals".

News from the Victoria Golf Club's marketing department confirmed the official opening of The Residences would take place on Saturday June 27th.

It further clarified "The Residences is 80 percent sold out, however 30 large, luxury 2 or 3-bedroom apartments are still available. All are complete and can be viewed. Prices for these unique apartments start from €495,000 to over €800,000 for the very best".

The press release continued "The Directors of The Residences are delighted to report that the forthcoming inaugural Golf

Road deaths halved

The number of fatalities resulting from traffic accidents has been reduced by a staggering 47 percent in the space of only seven years, a report unveiled in Brussels this week has shown. Amidst the incredulity and bemusement of detractors of Portugal's ability to improve roads and education of drivers, old and new, the country undertook in 2001 to have road fatalities down by 50 percent by the year 2010 – a target which the EU this week said it would reach with ease.

Portugal has this week been highlighted as the European Union country which has managed the biggest reduction in deaths from road accidents, cutting deaths by an average of about 15 percent a year since 2001.

While Portugal is mid-table on the European rankings, it has made huge improvements from being the country whose roads were the most deadly on the continent a decade ago.

According to the 3rd Performance Index on road safety in the EU, Portugal will be one of only six member states to meet targets set out in 2001 in terms of reducing road fatalities.

The only other countries expected to meet targets set out in 2001 and agreed to be EU states are Luxembourg, France, Spain, Latvia and Belgium.

Currently, Portugal records 83 road deaths per million inhabitants per annum (totaling 776 fatalities last year).

Eight years ago, this figure was more than double at 171, placing Portugal 27th out of the 27 EU member states along with Israel, Switzerland and Norway surveyed in the Index.

With the reduction in road deaths, Portugal has now risen to 17th, and is expected to continue improving.

Luis Farinha, vice-chairman of the National Road Safety Authority this week told PÚBLICO following the release of these results that there is not one single factor that can be attributed to Portugal's notable performance the past decade.

"There is not one specific contributing reason. Infrastructures, the cars, human behaviour – they have all helped", he said, adding:

"We want to be among the top ten European states when it comes to road safety by 2015".

The government also ex-

Six-language manual to help foreign mothers

Because of difficulties in communicating with foreigners, a doctor and four nurses have translated a guide for new mothers into six languages which will be distributed free of charge in health centres throughout the country.

The 'First Handbook for Maternal Health' is aimed at foreign mothers residing in Portugal and offers advice on how to look after new-born babies. It has been published in Portuguese and also French, English, Romanian, Russian, Chinese and Ukrainian, being officially launched at the Padre Alves Correia Centre (CEPAC), in Lisbon. Cândida Mendes, a paediatrician and one of the book's authors, told the Lusa News Agency that the idea came about after she encountered language barriers when trying to teach foreign mothers how to look after their offspring.

"During our daily service at the neonatal department we would be confronted with language barriers when trying to talk to foreign mothers, who come from the Eastern bloc, Africa, and other places and who didn't know how to speak Portuguese".

So faced with that obstacle, as well as a growing number of foreign nationals giving birth in Portugal, Dr. Mendes plus four co-workers decided to translate the manual into six foreign languages "to better communicate with immigrants".

Admitting that translating the manual was hard work Cândida Mendes nevertheless believes it was worth it as the book will help many mothers and health professionals.

The book essentially explains how to look after newborn babies, helping new mothers with procedures such as disinfecting babies' umbilical cords, changing nappies, bathing, breast feeding, and dealing with colic.

It also underlines the importance to mothers of having their babies checked using the Guthrie test (more commonly known as the 'heel prick test'), which picks up on metabolic illnesses.

This project is supported by the High Commission for Health as well as the High Commission for Immigration and Intercultural Dialogue, and the Portuguese Neonatal Society.

At 111 years of age Portugal's oldest person, António Fernandes de Castro of Durrães, Barcelos, died on Monday this week and was buried on Tuesday.

Born on January 6th 1898 (the 19th century), António Castro lived more than 40,800 days, spanning the whole of the 20th century and part of the 21st century.

His long life centred mostly on being a farm labourer and he was treasured by the entire village where he lived, regarded as an honorary local leader.

A book about Anónio Castro's life, published by the local parish in commemoration of his 100th birthday, describes him as "a good 'waterer' who never 'held people hostage'".

António Castro raised 10 children, who gave him more than 24 grandchildren, almost 30 great-grandchildren, and two great-great-grandchildren.

Door open for bilateral talks with US on reception of Guantanamo inmates

Conditions now exist for "concrete bilateral negotiations" between Portugal and the United States on resettling some detainees from the US detention centre for terrorism suspects at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, the Lisbon Foreign Ministry said.

After the visit of US special envoy on closing the Guantanamo detention facility, Daniel Fried, for talks with senior Lisbon diplomats, the Foreign Ministry said in a statement: "The way is open for the start of concrete bilateral negotiations with the US on this issue."

Fried's visit to Portugal was part of a tour of European Union member states for talks on closing Guantanamo. Washington and the EU issued a joint statement this week saying EU member states will accept individual detainees in return for the US bearing the transfer cost and furnishing intelligence on the individuals concerned.

The Portuguese Foreign Ministry communiqué said Lisbon will make a decision on acceptance of Guantanamo residents after "close coordination and consultation with our European partners."

Italy became the third EU state to accept inmates from Guantanamo but other EU member states are dragging their heels. Germany has called for Washington to set an example by accepting prisoners from the Cuban camp.

Portuguese Foreign Minister Luis Amado first suggested that Europe should offer to accept Guantanamo detainees without terrorism convictions.

Child drowns off Algarve coast

A ten year old child drowned on Coco island, in Olhão, last Sunday. After disappearing from where she had been playing, and searching the whole island, her parents alerted Maritime Police. After extensive searches the girl's body was found, not far from where she disappeared.

Maritime Police received an alert at 13h55 on Sunday afternoon after the child's parents could not find her on Coco Island, located in the Ria Formosa.

A rescue boat from Santa

Maria was sent to the location, together with a Maritime Police vessel. After initial searches proved fruitless, a third boat was sent to the location but, just before its arrival, the child's body was found, close to where she had disappeared on the beach.

The crew aboard the boat attempted to resuscitate the child until reaching the pier in Olhão, as did the Emergency Medical Services in the ambulance on the way to Faro Hospital, but to no avail.

Sixth case of swine flu confirmed

The Portuguese Health Ministry has said it has confirmed a new case of swine flu, raising the number of cases detected in the country to six.

The latest confirmed case was of a 26-year-old man who returned from a trip to the United States five days ago, the Ministry said. The patient was described as being in a "stable" condition.

Last Thursday health authorities said the existence of five confirmed cases did "not represent an increase in concern", adding, however, that this did not mean a lessening of "preventive measures" implemented by the Health Ministry.

Half of Portugal's roads are poorly signed

For the first time the problems found on Portugal's roads have been analysed in a study by the Portuguese Association of Signage Contractors and Manufacturers (AFESP), who have estimated that more than half of the country's roads are poorly signed in one way or another.

Main problems include lines that are faded, invisible or hard to see at night, arrows pointing in the wrong direction, and contradicting signs for both vehicles and pedestrians.

Despite the study being based on 59 stretches of road in 18 districts around the country, a total 2,400 kilometres, the authors of the study believe that the estimated 50 percent of poorly signed roads could actually be far higher.

Roads with no signage whatsoever were not included in the study.

Some of the worst stretches could be found in Lisbon (the Segunda Circular) and the EN8 that links Lisbon to Torres Vedras.

Report coordinator João Almeida explained "the biggest problem is at night, as painted lines do not contain enough reflective glass spheres".

João Almeida explained it is "cheap" to paint the lines on a National Road (Estrada Nacional - EN), a kilometre costing approximately €1,200, and that extra glass particles in the paint would not change the price. Reportedly, the type of paint chosen by Portugal to use on its roads contains the minimum EU recommended amount of glass particles, as opposed to neighbouring Spain which uses paint with the highest recommended amount of particles.

He added the scenario was particularly disturbing as "the population is ageing and driving times are getting longer and later", emphasizing better conditions are necessary to ensure this happens safely.

However, these particles are believed to lose their qualities after two years, in the case the highest quality of paint, so a road that is delineated with paint containing the minimum recommended particles, as is the case in Portugal, should have its lines re-painted every six months.

Since the beginning of this year 300 people have died on Portugal's roads, 5.6 percent less than the same period last year.

To encourage municipalities to become involved in the task of improving road signage the Government is offering a 'Best Municipality' prize for the town or city that best complies with signage and safety rules, techniques, and good practice, with the main intention of investing in infrastructures that improve citizens' mobility.

Traffic fine revenue nosedives

During the first four months of this year the Portuguese paid 14 million euros less in fines in comparison to the same period last year, a drop of 61.3 percent in related revenue.

However, this has not been attributed to Portuguese drivers becoming more careful or civil, but to the lack of bureaucratic thoroughness as well as GNR strikes.

Traffic crimes have so far earned the country's coffers 8.9 million euros during the first four months of this year, which pales in comparison to the 23 million euros shelled out during the first four months of 2008.

This year's revenue is made up of on-the-spot fines as well as fines that were inherited following the DGV-ANSR changeover, the ANSR officially taking over procedures from the DGV on January 6th this year.

At the time it was feared that some 20,000 fines still being processed would be lost in the changeover, though this does not now seem to be the case.

To keep on top of the issue, ANSR has recruited 30 trainee lawyers to work for three months processing the backlog of fines and tackling more complex issues on a rate of €1.67 for each case settled.

Education Minister denies mobile AIDS units will reach school playgrounds

Portugal's Minister for Education, Maria de Lurdes Rodrigues, has vehemently refuted reports published at the beginning of the week that five mobile units had been purchased by the Portuguese Youth Institute (IPJ) to carry out HIV tests in schools as of October, describing the reports as "alarming and abusive".

Police investigate daily cases of child abuse

Following the arrest of a member of Familião's Child Protection Committee, suspected of sexually abusing a 16-year-old boy, it has emerged that the sexual abuse of minors in Portugal seems to be on the up as police confirm an average of four cases being reported every day.

Last year PJ police investigated 1,542 reports of sexual abuse involving children, 131 cases of which were rape.

According to Oporto's PJ figures, in Northern Portugal, during the first quarter of this year, seven sexual predators were arrested; two more than during the whole of 2005, when five suspects were detained.

This was attributed to the introduction of a new law in September 2008 which transferred the investigation of sexual crimes to the PJ police, who despite the increase in the number of arrests, claim more could be done if crimes were reported more quickly.

EU leaders nominate José Manuel Barroso for new term

Former Portuguese Prime Minister José Manuel Durão Barroso gets the nod from the Council for another five years, the European Commission has announced.

EU leaders have unanimously endorsed President Barroso for a second five-year term. The nomination now goes before the European parliament.

The new assembly holds its first meeting in July. If it backs him for another term, Mr Barroso will be charged with putting together a new commission.

The President urged member countries and the parliament to support his plans for an ambitious agenda over the next five years.

Portuguese daily newspaper Diário de Notícias broke the story, which stated that the IPJ, with financial backing from the High Commission for Health, had purchased five mobile units to travel around schools, discos and music festivals, to carry out HIV/AIDS tests as well as distribute free condoms amongst students within the 12 to 25-year-old age range.

On the same day as the reports were published there was an immediate backlash from doctors and parents who contested presumptions that the tests were confidential and did not require adult permission.

Susana Ramos, allegedly one of the project's coordinators and IPJ vice-president, was quoted as saying "a young person who feels the need to be tested will be able to do so in total confidentiality without the risk of running into a parent or neighbour".

According to the report, Susana Ramos also confirmed lectures and 'Questions and Answers' sessions were to be held as part of the campaign.

It was stated that a protocol had been signed between the IPJ and the High Commission for Health to acquire the five mobile units, which were said to have cost a total €400,000 for the project, which hoped to reach up to 150,000 youths.

Prior to this project the IPJ offered a similar service to Portugal's young people through their regional bureaus. According to Susana Ramos, via this service, "In Bragança, for example, more than 1,000 HIV tests were carried out".

In 2007, IPJ offices throughout Portugal helped a total of 50,000 young people regarding a number of issues relating to their health and lifestyle.

The report also said the mobile AIDS testing for students had been defended by the High-Commissioner for Health, Paediatrician Maria do Céu Machado, who was quoted as saying "young people are very interested in talking about sex and having tests done confidentially", and concluded it is "the duty of any health professional to give all possible support to patients, whatever their age".

On the other hand, Portuguese Minister for Health Ana Jorge was reported as saying parents should decide whether or not they will give consent for under-age children to have the tests done.

"Complementary tests or examinations should not be carried out on people, whatever their age, without full information of what is being done, the results, and the consequences of the results. That is part of a health professional's competencies".

Minister Ana Jorge did, however, apparently agree that "it is fundamental to have mobile units" to give adequate information about HIV to young people.

According to the National Committee for HIV, in Portugal at present there are 281 under-19s currently infected with the virus.

Following this report, which was published on Monday morning, a subsequent update made public later that afternoon broadcast a statement from Education Minister Maria de Lurdes Rodrigues who said, "It is not true that as of next year HIV tests will be available in our schools".

She said the project has "no possibility" of help from the Ministry of Education and considered the reports "completely abusive and alarming, creating huge confusion in an area that is a school's responsibility".

Drink and drugs plaguing Portugal's future

As the Portuguese Government prepares to approve a National Plan for Combating Alcoholism, drawn up by the Institute for Drugs and Drug Addiction (IDT), it has emerged that more people are seeking professional help for heroin addiction than alcoholism. This is despite the consumption of alcohol being rife in Portugal and soaring amongst educated youths and women.

In 2005, there were an estimated 1.8 million excessive drinkers and chronically ill alcoholics in Portugal. According to a report that year from the World Drink Trends organisation, 60 percent of the country's 12-16-year-olds and more than 70 percent of over-16s said they drank regularly.

That year alcohol was estimated as the fourth highest cause of death in Portugal, being responsible for 33 percent of vehicle-related fatalities.

Driving under the influence of alcohol, for which the maximum legal limit is 0.5 grams of alcohol per litre of blood (the equivalent of approximately three small beers), doubles the risk of being involved in a fatal road accident, according to official information.

Two weeks ago a 26-year-old British woman, resident in Carvoeiro, was found dead in her apartment, which reportedly contained numerous empty glasses and bottles of alcohol. It was the latest of many alcohol-related incidents that have involved foreigners in Portugal over recent years.

In October last year 46-year-old Birgit Peinoff, who also lived in Carvoeiro, was attacked by her ex-husband who had a history of alcoholism and violence. She was stabbed three times by Peter Peinoff, though none of the wounds were fatal. Her ex-husband's body was later found in the villa's swimming pool; face down with a bottle of champagne floating alongside. Excessive drinking was believed to be responsible for both the frenzied attack and his drowning.

Earlier that year, in May 2008, a British couple on holiday in Vilamoura had their three children taken into protective custody after they passed out in different reception areas of the hotel where they had been staying.

Initial reports suggested the couple had been on a binge-drinking spree though they later denied drinking excessively, claiming they had been affected by illness, not alcohol.

That same year in August an amateur footballer collapsed and died after drinking 40 pints and 30 alcopops on a five-day, end-of-season holiday with team-mates in Vilamoura.

He was admitted to the Gloucestershire Royal Hospital, Gloucester the day after he returned to the UK, suffering crippling stomach pains from suspected pancreatitis, which doctors attributed to heavy drinking.

And more famously, in September 2008, former England footballer Paul Gascoigne was rushed to Faro Hospital after a suspected overdose of pills and alcohol that was believed to have been a suicide attempt.

Reports in the UK press at the time claimed he had recently fled from a rehabilitation unit in Tunis near Silves to a five-star hotel in Vale do Lobo.

In Portugal alcohol is still significantly cheaper than in other European countries, like the UK and Ireland. In some establishments, during 'Happy Hour' promotions, it is possible to purchase a pint of beer for as little as €1. But it is not just foreigners who are being seduced by Portugal's accessibility-priced drinks; Portuguese youths, particularly those with an education, are now the country's primary alcohol consumers and abusers. And heavy drinking amongst females in this country is also steadily rising.

Figures from Portimão's Barlavento Hospital showed that in 2008, 56 people were treated in the Western Algarve for alcohol intoxication, of those 15 were aged between 15 and 25, 9 of whom were female.

In the last decade, according to National Health Enquiries carried out on mainland Portugal in 1995/96 and 1998/99, drinking amongst youths and women had already started to rise significantly across the country. And surveys carried out in 2005 by the IDT's regional Algarve bureau found that 65.1 percent of the Algarve's 18-year-olds admitted to drinking; 17 percent said they drank on a daily basis, 9.4 percent admitted to drinking on a weekly basis, and 54 percent said they drank occasionally.

These figures, according to the IDT-Algarve, make alcohol the most consumed 'drug' amongst the region's teenagers, having risen from 61.2 percent in the year 2000 to 65.1 percent in 2005.

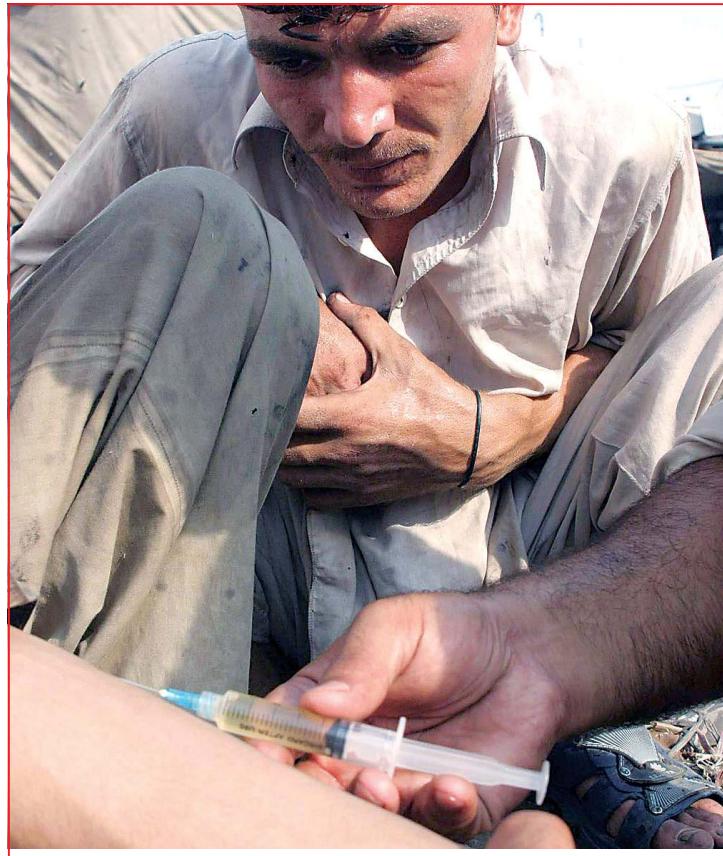

It is widely agreed that drinking in Portugal is starting at a younger age and in larger quantities, with trends like binge-drinking becoming common occurrences. Hence IDT representatives are hoping this month their proposal to change drinking laws in Portugal will be approved in Parliament.

Included in the law change is a proposal to up the legal drinking age from 16 to 18, as well as more thorough official control and "better organisation of related services".

In a statement sent to The Portugal News, António Pina, of the Regional Algarve IDT's Technical Support Department, said: "We can conclude that, while overall there are fewer consumers of alcohol in the Algarve than the rest of the country, there is a higher and growing consumption amongst the region's young people, particularly those who are educated".

Last year 3,249 individuals in the Algarve were using the IDT's services, which centre on rehabilitation and social re-integration for drug and alcohol addicts.

Of those, 463 were new arrivals that year and a total of 37,639 consultations were given. However, the majority of IDT patients do not ask for help regarding alcohol abuse. In 2007, heroin was still the main substance of abuse for 75 percent of IDT patients, though

Drug addicts inject drugs on 25 June 2007, on the eve of International Day against Drug Abuse and Illicit Trafficking which is marked every year on 26 June. (Photo: EPA/Arshad Arbab) alcohol came second, affecting 12.5 percent.

This scenario is remarkably different to the previous decade, when IDT figures between 1988 and 1998 showed that only 1.2 percent of individuals turned to the IDT for alcohol-related issues, and heroin was responsible for 94 percent of the institute's patients.

A staggering thirty percent of individuals being helped by the IDT Algarve are foreign nationals, the majority of whom seek treatment for hard-drug abuse.

It was highlighted "however, alcoholics tend to seek help at a very late stage (in 2007 the average was at 46 years of age, as opposed to 30 years-of-age for most other drugs). That is why our services have almost no young people between 16 and 25 years of age asking for help with drink-related problems. These youngsters, who effectively abuse alcohol, have not yet accepted the problem and are only known through community studies".

China open to 'triangular' cooperation with Lisbon

At the end of the millennium the outgoing Governor of Macao, Vasco Rocha Vieira, followed by an aide de camp, holds a Portuguese flag as he leaves Macao's Government Palace after a flag lowering ceremony on 19 December, 1999. Rocha left his office for the last time before Portugal formally handed Macao back to China, ending over 400 years of colonial rule. (Photo: AFP)

China is open to "triangular" cooperation with Portugal in Africa, Brazil and throughout the Lusophone bloc, Lisbon's last governor in Macao has said.

Gen. Vasco Rocha Vieira, on a private visit to Beijing, told Lusa the Asian powerhouse was increasingly a "planetary partner" and that Lisbon should team up with it in business and other initiatives in "Africa, Brazil and the European Union".

China, Gen. Rocha Vieira said, had "a long-term policy for Af-

Report of foreign bank and financial accounts

U.S. persons with financial interests in or signatory authority over one or more foreign financial accounts with an aggregate value of at least $10,000 at any time in 2008 are required to file Form TD F 90-22.1 – REPORT OF FOREIGN BANK AND FINANCIAL ACCOUNTS (FBAR). Included in aggregate value is cash, stock and securities. This report is due 30 June 2009. The form and instructions can be downloaded at www.irs.gov.

FBAR is a law enforcement vehicle under the Bank Secrecy Act. It provides important information to domestic and international law enforcement agencies. Failure to file FBAR can result in a $10,000 fine. As a six year statute of limitations applies, fines could be as much as $60,000. Further, the US tax authority (IRS) can seek criminal penalties.

On 27 March 2009, IRS announced a six month amnesty for Americans not in compliance to report their worldwide income, gains, bank accounts, trusts and other entities. While they are required to file annual tax returns reporting global income, only some 33 1/3% comply. And those who file the intrusive FBAR reports are only 20%. Voluntary disclosure means voluntarily reporting previously undisclosed income by filing an amended or delinquent tax return, FBAR report or other information return such as applies to U.S. persons invested in a foreign corporation, foreign partnership or foreign trust.

IRS defines a U.S. person as a citizen or resident of the United States, a domestic partnership, a domestic corporation, or a domestic estate or trust.

The complex definitions of what constitute FBAR financial interests is any U.S. person who has an interest in a bank, securities or other financial account in a foreign country for which the owner of record or holder of legal title is: a) a person acting as an agent, nominee, attorney, or in some other capacity; b) a corporation in which the United States person owns directly or indirectly more than 50% of the total value of shares of stock or more than 50% of the voting power for all shares of stock; c) a partnership in which the U.S. person owns an interest in more than 50% of the profits (distribute share of income, taking into account any special allocation agreement) or more than 50% of the capital of the partnership; or d) a trust in which the U.S. person either has a present beneficial interest, either directly or indirectly, in more than 50% of the assets or from which such person receives more than 50% of the current income. Or, simply speaking, if you had at least $10,000 in foreign financial accounts in 2008, you need to file FBAR.

IRS is relentlessly increasing its efforts to identify taxpayers who may have income earned and assets preserved in foreign financial accounts. Later this year, the Service will be granted increased powers for enforcing international tax compliance. rica, Brazil and the CPLP (the eight-nation Community of Portuguese Language Countries) and was open to triangular cooperation with Portugal" in those areas.

He noted that Beijing favoured the "internationalisation" of Macao as a "liaison platform" for business and diplomatic relations with the Lusophone world.

Rocha Vieira, who oversaw the transfer of Macao's administration to China in 1999, arrived in Beijing Wednesday on a visit with members of his family and for talks with Chinese officials.

EU calls for open, independent and accountable governance of the Internet

The European Commission, the executive branch of the European Union, today called, in a strategic document, for more transparency and multilateral accountability in the governance of the internet. There are today 1.5 billion Internet users worldwide, 300 million of which are in the European Union's 27 Member States.

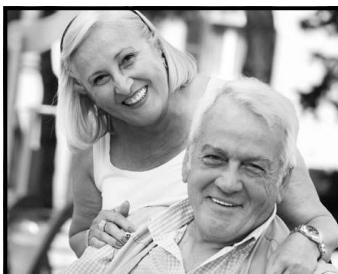

At present, a private US-based body, the Internet Corporation for Assigned Names and Numbers (ICANN), is responsible for coordinating key elements of the Internet. The Commission agrees that private companies should continue to take the lead in the day-to-day management of the operation of the Internet, as long as they are accountable and independent.

The Commission also believes that decisions about the Internet, especially those about openness and security, should be taken in a transparent and accountable manner because they affect everyone around the globe. ICANN currently operates under a Joint Project Agreement with the US Department of Commerce which expires on 30 September 2009. In the view of the European Commission, future Internet governance arrangements should reflect the key role that the global network has come to play for all countries.

Viviane Reding, the EU's Commissioner for Information Society and Media said: "The Internet Corporation for Assigned Names and Numbers is approaching a historic point in its development. Will it become a fully independent organisation, accountable to the global Internet community? Europeans would expect so, and this is what we will push for. I call on the United States to work together with the European Union to achieve this."

Over 1,500 textile workers in Portugal to receive EU help

The European Commission has this week approved an application from Portugal for assistance from the European Globalisation Adjustment Fund (EGF).

The application will now be sent to the European Parliament and Council for decision. If approved, the €832,800 requested will help 1,504 redundant workers in the textile sector back into employment as quickly as possible.

EU Employment Commissioner Vladimír Špidla said: "In the Portuguese textile sector, 97.8 percent of unemployment is concentrated in the north and central regions. I am therefore glad that the Portuguese authorities have chosen to apply for EGF funding, which will help to get these workers back onto the labour market as quickly as possible."

The Portuguese application concerns workers made redundant in 49 small- and medium-sized enterprises in the two neighbouring regions of north and central.

The northern region of Portugal is the most specialised in the EU in the textile and clothing sector. In terms of employment in this region, the sector represents over 14 percent of the total labour force.

In the central region, the textile and clothing industries represent 15 percent of industrial employment.

Following the end of the World Trade Organisation Multi-Fibre Arrangement at the end of 2004, imports of textile and clothing articles into the EU from lower-cost countries almost doubled. EU producers, including those in Portugal, were faced with a very competitive market.

In addition, much production has relocated from the EU to low-cost countries (China and India in particular).

The total estimated cost of the package of EGF assistance, which will include career guidance, vocational training, support for entrepreneurship, and skills recognition and certification for the redundant workers is €1.6 million, of which the European Globalisation Adjustment Fund has been asked to give €832,800.

No sackings at Ikea in Portugal

Swedish furniture giant Ikea announced this week that it will be cutting down its staff contingent by around five thousand across the globe.

Despite concerns that numbers would be reduced at Ikea's Matosinhos store in the north and at Alfragide just outside Lisbon, jobs here appear to be secure.

"We are going to fully comply with our expansion plans in Portugal, and as a result, this situation [cutting of staff] will not affect the country", a company representative was quoted as saying this week.

Neda Soltan: Anger and Fear

The grisly video of 26-year-old Neda Agha-Soltan dying in a Tehran street, shot down by a government thug, has already been seen by millions of Iranians. If the protesters against the alleged rigging of the recent election needed a dramatic image of martyrdom — and such images have a special resonance in Iran — they now have one. But things are not quite so simple.

Iranians living in The Netherlands and supporters shout slogans as they hold up flags and placards of the dead Iranian woman Neda Agha-Soltan during a protest against the Iranian election results, outside the Dutch Parliament in The Hague, The Netherlands on 23 June. Her death, all the more affecting because she was not actually a protester but just trapped in the midst of the demo, has enraged many people, but it has also frightened them. She was only one of ten people killed on Saturday, 21 June, in Tehran by the police and the Basiji (the volunteer militia that normally serves as the regime's "morality police") but hers is the death that you can actually watch.

It was very fast, very ugly, and clearly quite arbitrary. If this is what happens to innocent bystanders, are you sure you want to go out and demonstrate again tomorrow?

The conventional wisdom says that in Iran such deaths only fuel popular anger and make the demos grow bigger, and that is certainly what happened during the struggle to overthrow the Shah of Iran thirty years ago.

But there were only hundreds of demonstrators, not hundreds of thousands, on the streets of Tehran in the days after Neda's death.

The regime has now nailed its colours to the mast: Supreme Leader Ayatollah Ali Khamenei has said that he will back President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad's disputed election victory come what may. There will not be a compromise in which the elections are re-run, maybe with a different outcome that makes Mir Hossein Mousavi, the opposition leader, the new president, but leaves Ali Khamenei and the basic principles of the "Islamic revolution" in place.

The regime's heavy artillery, a parallel army called the Revolutionary Guards, has now been deployed on the streets, and its website makes it clear that it is willing to kill demonstrators: "The Guards will firmly confront in a revolutionary way rioters and those who violate the law." In Iran, the phrase "in a revolutionary way" instantly recalls the tens of thousands of alleged enemies of the new regime who were killed in mass hangings in 1989.

It is the regime that has deliberately raised the stakes, from a mere dispute about the outcome of an election to an existential struggle for the regime's survival. It is a gamble, of course, for there are many young Iranians who would be willing to fight it out on that ground — but their leaders are not.

All three presidential candidates who believe they were cheated in the election are stalwart supporters of the Islamic regime. How could they be otherwise, when all presidential candidates are vetted by the Guardian Council for their revolutionary and Islamic dedication? Mousavi was prime minister during the war with Iraq in 1980-88. Mohsen Rezaie is a former commander of the Revolutionary Guards. Even Mehdi Karroubi, the most liberal of the candidates, is a cleric who has served the revolution faithfully, if critically.

If it comes down to the survival of the Islamic revolutionary dispensation that they have devoted their lives to building, Mousavi, Rezaie and Karroubi are all ultimately on the same side of the barricades as Khamenei and Ahmadinejad. That is precisely what it's coming down to, by the bold or desperate decision (take your pick) of Ali Khamenei. As he intends, it leaves the young people in the streets (60 percent of Iranians are under 30) without leaders.

You could hear the anguish in Mousavi's open letter to the Guardian Council, which is supposedly investigating the election of 12 June: "We are not against the Islamic system and its laws but against lies and deviations, and just want to reform it." And he told his followers:

"Protesting against lies and fraud is your right, (but) in your protests continue to show restraint." Nor did he tell them when they should next come out on the street to protest.

As more information becomes available, it looks likelier and likelier that there was massive rigging of the polls. Mehdi Karroubi, for example, got 55.5 percent of the votes in his home province of Lorestan in the last presidential election in 2005. This time, according to the official figures, he got only 4.6 percent, with most of the remainder shifting to Ahmadinejad. That is not remotely credible, nor could it have happened by accident.

It now seems likely that Khamenei and Ahmadinejad knew in advance that the latter's re-election bid was doomed, and rigged the election to "save the Islamic regime," or at least their version of it. Nothing could have been clumsier or more drastic than the intervention that they made, but it may have served its purpose, at least in the short run.

The protesters know they have been cheated, but without leaders or organisation they may not be able to continue. We will know if it's really over on 31 July, forty days after the killing of Neda Agha-Soltan.

In the Shia tradition, that's when the forty days of mourning end.

During the revolt against the Shah, that was when the masses came out into the streets again to remember their martyrs. The game is still afoot, but the young, predictably, have been betrayed yet again by their elders.

Portugal willing to accept whale hunting in exchange for conservation pledge

Portugal has admitted it may agree to the return of international whaling in exchange for reinforced conservation measures for the large cetaceans.

Environmental Minister Francisco Nunes Correia appealed for flexibility regarding the matter, which is an attempt to resolve internal conflict that the International Whaling Committee (CBI) has been experiencing for years.

"A solution will only be found if both sides are willing to make concessions and to accept that any final result will not be perfect for either side", he said.

Portugal has said it is open to reintroducing whaling from some of its coastal towns, as Japan has demanded for a number of years.

But in exchange for opening its doors this country asks that some conservation measures are reinforced and whaling carried out under scientific programmes be reduced, because of which Japan slaughters hundreds of whales every year, particularly in Antarctica.

According to State Secretary for the Environment, Humberto Rosa, it will only make sense if an agreement is reached in which more protection for whales is ensured. "We are available to work on this", he said.

Commercial whaling at one point caused some species of cetaceans to reach the brink of extinction and has been suspended by a moratorium since 1986. Divided between countries that defend the activity and those that oppose it, the CBI has been struggling to avoid its own collapse.

New abuse law set for this summer

Following another case of a Child Protection Committee member being accused of sexually abusing a minor, this time a teacher, an urgent law change has been proposed in which compulsory checks of police records for adoption hopefuls as well as individuals applying for a job working with children is urged.

It was also proposed that such information remains public for a 23-year period, in an attempt to slash the number of child abuse cases.

As a result, individuals looking to adopt a child or work with children will be required to have a clean police record in that area.

It is predicted the new law will come into force this summer and will help in preventing sexual predators' access to minors.

Last week a teacher from Famalicão, also a member of a child protection committee, was accused of sexually abusing a 16-year-old and was arrested.

According to an Internal Annual Safety Report, more than 1,000 victims are exposed to predators every year. Last year 1,384 investigations were launched into accusations of sexual abuse of minors; 90 arrests were made from a total of 268 suspects.

This possible law change comes two years after Portugal signed the European Convention against sexual abuse and after the Attorney General warned of a "real danger" that paedophiles could adopt a child in Portugal.

Jobless put on summer fire alert

One thousand unemployed citizens have been enlisted by the GNR to man watchtowers in sensitive areas across Portugal, places that are prone to summer forest fires.

Their main task is to survey the areas to which they are assigned and alert Civil Protection authorities the minute a breakout is spotted.

In return the GNR is footing the bills for lunches, transport, and 20 percent of unemployment benefits.

This year 16,227 hectares of forest have already been burnt, four times as much as the same period of last year, which motivated the GNR to recruit the additional manpower who in some cases have substituted former employees.

Former fire vigilantes have not responded well to this measure, claiming they have more experience and those who were replaced by more cost-efficient labour were counting on the work.

Lieutenant-Colonel José Grisante, of the GNR's Nature and Environment Protection Service (SEPNA) argued "not all of the people who did this job were the best qualified for it, so this year we decided to recruit from job centres where there is a larger selection of candidates".

He added "all vigilantes receive the necessary training in order to detect fires and transmit information as quickly as possible".

The first 140 watchmen, who cover 70 posts, started work at the beginning of the month, on shifts between 11h00 and 19h00.

As of July 1st the surveillance will be carried out 24 hours a day and will include 236 GNR officers, taking the total number of 12,427 hectares.

watchmen to nearly 1,000.

Meanwhile Internal Affairs Minister Rui Pereira has blamed the climate for the increase in the amount of land burnt between January 1st and May 15th this year, saying "last year the weather conditions were very good, but this year they have worsened".

March has been highlighted as the worst month so far this year, during which 3,649 fires were reported, scorching a total of 12,427 hectares.

Floresta was set up in 2006 to raise money for local charities at every available opportunity throughout the year. However once a year, supporters meet for a weekend of golf and entertainment - the primary reason being to help raise funds for Algarve charities. In its four years of existence so far, the Charity Fund Weekend has proved to be a huge success, raising over €300,000 net.

The main sponsor of the event this year was the Portuguese insurance company Tranquilidade with Baptista Supermarket in Luz also contributing generously.

Only local charities benefit from this annual event and this year these include: NECI School for handicapped children based in Luz, Associação Oncológica do Algarve (cancer care facilities),

"It is with some emotion that I inaugurate this office", António Pina elaborated, explaining that the Carvoeiro tourism office was of particular importance to him as his father was a native.

Mayor Inácio continued the praise telling The Portugal News "I am very pleased to be opening this office as it is like a welcoming room for visitors, it contributes to improving the image of Carvoeiro".

Dr. Elisabete Máximo, coordinator of regional tourism offices, confirmed that the ERTA hoped to inaugurate a further three branches, in Sagres, Quarteira and Monte Gordo.

Rosa Maria Santos, an employee at the revamped Carvoeiro Tourist Office is looking forward to receiving some of the many thousands of tourists that visit Carvoeiro every year.

"We are here to educate as well as help tourists", she said, adding "this office couldn't be in a better place".

It is another essential part of a fully revamped Carvoeiro whose downtown square has been totally transformed over the past 12 months, as has its roadways, which are now in the final phases of completion following many months of disruption.

Lions Club charity sale

On May 17th the Lions Clube de Loulé raised €450 and are grateful to all who came along and supported them.

The next sales will be on July 19th and September 27th, held as usual at the Centro Comunitário in Almancil, from 09.30-12.00. There will be bargain prices; good quality clothes, bric-and-brac, shoes and linen for sale. Admission is free and refreshments will be available.

Lisbon Bike Tour participant dies

The 2009 Lisbon Bike Tour gathered thousands of bicycle enthusiasts on the Vasco da Gama bridge last Sunday, in the fourth year of the event. Unfortunately though, during the race, one of the cyclists suffered a heart attack and died on the bridge mid-race.

The 63 year old man suffered a heart attack on the bridge and was aided by an off-duty Red Cross nurse, who was also participating, whilst waiting for Emergency Medical Services (INEM) to arrive. Her efforts were in vain though as Emergency Medical Services only arrived twenty minutes later, by which time the man had died.

Débora Alves, the Red Cross Nurse who aided the victim, considered the INEM's late arrival "unacceptable".

The Lisbon Bike Tour organisation did not share the same point of view however, claiming it would have been very difficult for the INEM to have provided a more effective service as the sudden heart attack happened amongst thousands of people, which hampered their response time, adding that several elements from the organisation gave support whilst waiting for the INEM to arrive.

Mother fighting for son's return gets inspiring visit

The teenage mother of a child that Cascais Courts decided to give up for adoption received a surprise visit by the director of Faro's Refúgio Aboim Ascensão, where her son is being cared for, in Cascais last weekend.

Luis Villas-Boas travelled to Cascais on Saturday 20th, where Ana Rita Leonardo remained in protest outside the Court building for five straight days, as the Courts have not yet reversed their decision to allow the teenage mother to take care of her child. Having not seen her son for six months, Luis Villas-Boas made the journey to send her a kiss from Martim and to say that he was doing alright, looking handsome and grown up, as well as to give some support to the distraught mother. "He told me to be calm, that everything would work out and that Martim will come back to me" said Ana Rita, the fifteen year old mother who had her son taken away on February 26th 2007 because she did not have the necessary conditions to take care of him.

Three days prior to his visit, Villas-Boas sent a clinical report to the Cascais court defending the re-evaluation of Ana Rita's case as she believes she should be given the chance to take care of her own child.

Over the past few months, since she was prohibited from seeing her child at the Aboim Ascensão Refuge as Martim became emotionally distressed when she left, Ana Rita has staged several protests in order to be able to see her son again, with hopes of one day being able to take back custody of her child.

Arts and Crafts Fair handed major investment

Turismo de Estoril will be investing €300,000 in the 46th Arts and Crafts Fair of Estoril, the oldest of its kind in Portugal, which is expected to attract 150,000 people.

"The Arts and Crafts Fair is entering a new cycle because it is the first year that the organisation has been handed to Turismo de Estoril" declared Duarte Nobre Guedes, a member of the organization, adding that the format will not change, although some changes will occur to improve the quality of the Fair. Other members said the event is not being organised to generate profit and that the revenue will only be used to cover costs.

To be held from July 2nd to August 30th, the Estoril Arts and Crafts Fair (FIARTIL) will have around 300 craftsmen showing their skills and techniques garnered from several different areas of the country, using materials such as wood, glass and clay.

Golf tournament and summer lunch

On Friday 12th June, 39 golfers took part in the 75th anniversary of St. Andrew's Society, Lisbon's 'Scotland versus The Rest of the World' Tournament at Estoril Golf Club.

With 19 Scots and 20 brave souls representing the rest of the world, the final scores ranged from 4 to 39 stableford points. The gross prize was won by Ron Goddard, representing Scotland with 39 points. The first net prize with 37 points was won by Denys Stormont, also representing Scotland. Second and third prizes were taken by the Rest of the World represented by Chico Leite Monteiro and David Gray, winning on a count-back over Bruce Dawson and Richard Evans. David Gray and Miranda Thomas won the longest drive prizes and Sally Buxton was nearest the pin.

The Quaich was won by the Scottish team with an average of 28.73 beating the Rest of the World, whose average was 27.75.

A convivial lunch was attended by over 50 people at the Quinta de Santo António in Malveira da Serra. Thanks to our sponsors, Glenfiddich, malt whisky flowed freely before, during and after lunch and all prize winners were presented with a bottle of this very special malt whisky.

The next event in the Society's calendar is The St. Andrew's Ball, to be held on Saturday 21st November in The Hotel Palácio, Estoril. This promises to be a special occasion to mark 75 uninterrupted years of the celebration of Scottish heritage and culture in Portugal. Very early booking is advised as this event is generally sold out months in advance. Contact Secretary Theresa Adams for more information on adams@sapo.pt

Biggest gay march ever

Over one thousand people gathered at the Príncipe Real Gardens for the tenth Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual and Transsexual pride march, which seeks to fight for equal rights amongst all citizens, regardless of their sexual orientation.

ILGA (International Lesbian and Gay Association) Portugal organised an all gay, lesbian and transsexual march which began at the Príncipe Real gardens, in Lisbon, on Friday 19th June, in order to speak out for equal rights, regardless of people's sexual orientation. "This is a moment of both celebration and vindication where we will affirm that the public space is ours as well, and affirm that we too, as with any other citizen, have exactly the same rights and we will once more vindicate the equality before the law, specifically our right to marry" stated the President of ILGA Portugal, Paulo Corte-Real.

Marching and chanting lines such as "Whether a man or a woman, I will love who I want", "No more, no less, equal rights" the group of over one thousand made their way to Restauradores Square, representing the event's best attendance yet, in its ten years of existence: "It is not a question of numbers that is relevant, it is mainly the enthusiasm shown by people and I think that the enthusiasm has been felt this year, as we have a clear course in the direction of equality" said Paulo Corte-Real however.

This year's organisation counted among its supporters, besides the ILGA, Portugal's Associação Cultural Janela Indiscreta, Associação para o Planeamento da Família, Médicos pela Escolha, ATTAC Portugal, Não te Prives, Panteras Rosa, Grupo de Católicos Homossexuais, Rede Portuguesa de Jovens para a Igualdade de Oportunidades, SOS Racismo, União de Mulheres Alternativa e Resposta and Rede Ex-aequo.

João Nunes Construções

Established in 1989, João Nunes Construções is a family-run business that now boasts a portfolio of over 100 made-to-measure homes across the Algarve, constructed from scratch. Their vast expertise in all things property-construction-related cater for extensions, renovations, building management and construction supervising. Owned and run by João Nunes, with the help of son-in-law, civil engineer Thierry, and general manager Sr. Martins Snr. (Thierry's father), João Nunes Construções strives to create the best possible relationship with their clients. All client input is highly valued and nothing is too much to ask for or accommodate.

João Nunes welcomes clients to visit the sites at any time, "to see how their property is coming along and if it is to their satisfaction".

"We know we are not just building a house," explained Thierry, "we are building peoples' dreams, so we need to listen to everything they say".

As well as renovations, extensions and upgrades, João Nunes build their own properties from scratch though always leave flexibility to accommodate future owners' wishes.

Working closely with a team of architects and engineers, the company can also design and build homes for those who own a plot but have yet to develop it. One particularity João Nunes pride themselves on is being constantly on par with the latest construction legislations. For example, earlier this year new rules were applied to construction in Portugal, aiming to make new-builds more energy efficient and eco-friendly, as a norm.

João Nunes' constructions incorporate high quality materials, based on double wall structures with inbuilt insulation and air circulation facilities, to avoid condensation and humidity, complying with advanced construction methods and surpassing standard requirements.

Budgets are kept transparent and as detailed as possible, with no hidden extras.

DELEME JANELAS, a window of opportunity

Window specialists DELEME JANELAS is a registered brand belonging to the DELEME COMERCIAL group.

DELEME COMERCIAL started its activity in 1998 with the objective of becoming the largest national reference in windows for private customers and with a mission of contributing to increasing comfort and safety for people in their homes, using solutions that also contribute to saving energy and using environmentally-friendly resources.

DELEME JANELAS' windows are made with the concern of offering maximum durability, high levels of isolation, security and energy efficiency. DELEME JANELAS benefits from a partnership with a European market-leading renovation company - TRYBA -, but also gives its products the bonus of a national incorporation of more than 70 percent in overall value. In 1999 a first outlet in Cantanhede was opened, followed by Lisbon, the Algarve, and later on, in Oporto.

The stores are retail points complete with spacious show rooms and offer clients a handy place where they can confer with professionals who are dedicated to giving the best possible advice. The overall goal is to offer a service of excellence.

The DELEME JANELAS brand is the first in Portugal to invest in offering the client a binomial of both products and service. The company believes that DELEME JANELAS' products and services offer the best compromise between price and quality.

However, the main differentiating factor was, and continues to be, service. Every year DELEME COMERCIAL has launched a variety of products and services that transmit trust to their clients and guarantee advantages to those investing in their solutions.

Adding to the value of their service is the care and thoroughness provided in the company's after-sales assistance.

Having now been established for more than 10 years, DELEME COMERCIAL is proud to be Portugal's most famous and highest recommended window company.

That is their best publicity.

Innovate with Ecossistemas

Already established as a leading construction and garden landscaping development company, Ecossistemas strive to keep up with the times by providing the latest technological features for homes and gardens, together with their expertise and unique approach towards projects, reasons why they are the best in the business.

Demonstrating innovation and adaptation to all sorts of environments, Ecossistemas have built a fantastic reputation over the years and are now a very well renowned brand when it comes to Garden Landscaping and Construction.

Their extensive portfolio is truly amazing, having designed and built over one thousand projects which complement their surroundings to perfection, many of which award winning projects, such as the Martinhal resort, which recently won the Best Luxury Development Worldwide and Best Landscape Design Worldwide at the prestigious Homes Overseas Awards Ceremony and gala dinner held at the Grosvenor House, Park Lane in London on 28 November 2008.

Each one of their projects meets even the most demanding client's requirements, with their teams carrying out projects from beginning to end, which includes the conception of the project, construction, mainnance and guarantee.

With over one hundred staff, you can rest assured Ecossistemas have the capabilities to carry out any sort of job, from landscaping a whole development to maintaining a single garden.

Some of their new features for gardens are the Interfog and Fogco, professionally installed systems which offer the same state of the art misting technology, provided to major theme parks and industry around the world, bringing down the ambient temperature whilst giving a tropical feel to the surrounding area. These systems can provide cooling of outdoor temperatures by up to 10 °C with no noticeable increase in humidity, mainly due to the tiny proportions of the water droplets (5 microns or 5 millions of a metre) sprayed into the area, which then flash evaporate, reducing the temperature.

Ecossistemas have also marked their presence in the research area, more concretely in Chemistry, soils, lawns, equipment and water resources, to maintain their grasp on the fast evolving business and to be able to provide clients with the best options available.

Their garden centre, located near Odíxere on the EN 125, has vast range products of gardening, outdoor furniture and decoration and also thousands of plants to ensure full customer satisfaction.

OneFone for Portugal

Designed to offer the competitive rates of a landline home-phone with the freedom and versatility of a handy mobile, the OneFone wonder phone has, since last summer, been revolutionising the telecommunications market.

Available exclusively through World Telecom, the OneFone Home Pack is based on a single monthly payment of €24.99 for which users enjoy unlimited phone calls to 11 countries, including most of Europe and the USA.

At the size of a standard mobile phone the OneFone can be used throughout Portugal, which now has 90 percent network coverage with recently reinforced coverage in the Eastern Algarve (Vale do Lobo / Quinta do Lago, Vilamoura, Quarteira, etc).

The phone is a completely mobile unit and can be used anytime, anywhere, without inflated rates. All you have to do is key in a simple digit code and off you go - with your phone. This makes life very easy if you are a frequent traveller or will be moving home. No wires, no re-routing calls, and no waiting in lines to sign up for a new phone and respective number.

So what is the draw-back? There isn't one.

The OneFone is even beneficial for those calling you; as it is a nomadic number, they pay the same fixed rate as a regular landline phone number.

A Business Pack is available and differs from the Home Pack in that, whilst calls are not unlimited, it offers 500 free minutes and then any subsequent phone calls at heavily discounted rates.

One single payment of €85 (mobile unit) or €60 (desktop unit, both excluding IVA) is required to purchase the phone, plus the monthly bill of €24.99. That's it. Calls unlimited!

Pedro Serrão, General Manager of World Telecom, explained: "This product is a brilliant alternative to regular mobile phones as it is cheaper to call from and cheaper to call to. It is also an excellent replacement for the standard landline phone as not only can you use it in and outside your home, but in and outside your home town."

He added, "It really is as good as it sounds. It's a simple as that."

Richard plays a scorcher

Richard Betts winner of the D'Arcy Orders Flag Competition 2009

On a very hot day 25 players turned up to play for the D'Arcy Orders Cup.

The competition is medal play with a slight difference, whereby each player has their individual handicap added to the par of the course and together gives them the total amount of strokes that may be used, and when completed they then place their flag on the Fairway or Green etc which indicates they have finished.

The majority of players ended up either on the 15th, 16th or 17th holes.

Mark Dawson came in 3rd place when he ended 20mts short of the 18th green.

Two members went on to play the 19th, with Denys Stormont having one stroke remaining and Richard Betts with two.

Richard (1st) did not require the second as he passed Denys (2nd) on the fairway to take the Cup.

The longest drive for the Ladies was awarded to Jean Judd and Mark Dawson took the Men's.

The "in form" Richard was also nearest the pin, and the Captain's prize went to James Scarlet (in sympathy) as he took 13 strokes on two holes and finished his allocation on the 13th.

On a wonderful warm evening 40 members attended the prize giving and dinner at the Restaurant Jackpot in Estoril (opposite the Casino), and we were treated to an excellent meal and service on the new terrace.

The next competition, the "Cannon Ball" will be at Estoril Golf Club on Friday 17th July followed by a Buffet lunch at the club.

Bowls Algarve Summer League

Series six of the Summer league saw the clubs descend on Pedras (Cabanas) on another lovely day. Albufeira Cats clashed with PDF Pirates and the Pirates won convincingly by 37-22 and by 9 points to 1. This improved Pirates league situation quite dramatically, but Cats' continue to languish. Amendoeira and Pedras played out a tight match, Amendoeira eventually gaining the upper hand by 39-31 and 6 points to 4. Alvor Doves continued their smooth progress towards the league championship with a narrow 34-32 win over Valverde, claiming another 6 points against 4 to Valverde. Alvor Doves and Alvor Eagles played out a strange game, as the Eagles won only one set, but this was by 22-4, ensuring they won overall 36-30, but Larks took 6 points to 4.

Doves push on ahead of the pack on 43 points, well ahead of Pedras on 36 and Eagles on 34. Valverde have 30 points, closely followed by the improving Pirates on 29 and the Larks on 28 points. Amendoeira remain in touch with 27, however the Cats have found it hard to get going this year and lag behind on 13 points.

The final round of fixtures takes the teams to Parque da Floresta next Thursday for the grand finale and presentation of trophies.

Try this yummy modern Spanish tapas for your dinner or even as a starter, washed down with cooling lemonade slushy

Paella with chicken, courgettes and rosemary (Paella de pollo, calabacines y romero)

Serves 6 (8-10 as a starter)

175ml olive oil
1.4kg chicken breasts, boned and cut into pieces
1 large onion, chopped
5 cloves garlic, minced
1 large green pepper, chopped
75ml dry sherry
325g pudding rice
650ml chicken stock
1/4 tsp saffron
1/4 tsp turmeric
3 tbsp chopped fresh rosemary
3 large courgettes, cut into 4-cm strips
Salt and freshly-ground black pepper

Heat 50ml of the oil in a paella pan. Add the chicken and cook until done and browned on all sides. Set aside. Clean the pan and heat the remaining olive oil over medium heat. Add the onion and cook for five minutes. Add the garlic and green pepper and cook for three minutes. Add the sherry and cook for a further minute. Pour in the rice and sauté for five minutes. Mix in the stock, saffron, turmeric, browned chicken and one-and-a-half tablespoons of the rosemary and cook for 15 minutes.

Sprinkle in the remaining rosemary and stir. Arrange the courgettes over the rice, cover and cook for a further 10 minutes or until the rice and chicken are tender and the stock has been absorbed. Allow to cool for five minutes and serve.

Icy lemonade slushy (Granizado)

(Serves 10)

5 juicy lemons
600ml boiling water
175g sugar
600ml cold water
Crushed ice, to serve

Sitting out under the trees at night, waiting for the first breath of cool air after a long, hot day, nothing is as refreshing as a lemon granizado.

Wash the lemons and pare the zest from them with a potato peeler. Halve them, squeeze out the juice and reserve it. Put the zest in a bowl and pour the boiling water over it. Leave until cold.

Remove the zest and stir in the sugar and lemon juice. Let stand for five minutes, then stir again, checking that the sugar has dissolved. Bottle and chill this lemonade.

To serve, pour the lemonade into a jug and add an equal amount of cold water. Fill tall glasses with crushed ice, pour the liquid over it and drink through straws.

Letter re. Car imports

SIR, Your correspondent, Tan Man, appears to be quite mixed up. The requirement is not, owning for six months before coming here, but before obtaining 'residencia'. In this case he is exempt from import duty. European rules require both people and cars to be registered where they spend more than half the year. So be legal, obtain [your] 'residencia', import your car for €100 and register to vote. If in doubt consult a lawyer.

JIM GLASSBROOK, By e-mail

Cristiano Ronaldo

SIR, 'Ronaldo gets Real Record deal' (The Portugal News, 13th June). But who is paying this obscene amount of money during a global economic crisis brought on by the world banks? It has been reported that Banco Santander, the largest bank in the Euro region, who are also the main corporate sponsors for the McLaren-Mercedes F1 team, has approved Madrid's application for a massive loan of €70 million to assist them in signing Cristiano Ronaldo and Kaka for a combined figure in excess of €160m. In addition, Spanish savings bank Caja Madrid admitted that it has agreed to give Real Madrid a €76m loan.

The record-breaking transfer will earn Ronaldo €130 million over six years. He is expected to earn €12 million in the first year, rising by 25 per cent a year to €35m — a weekly wage of €650,000. That is more than the playing budget of the Algarve's top team SC Olhanense when they won the Division 2 Championship last season and 33 times more than the average Spaniard earns in a year.

For United, who paid £12.4 million for Ronaldo in 2003, the deal is good business, a net profit of £68 million. Even though the club has debts of more than £600 million, Sir Alex Ferguson will hope to use the money to replenish his squad. The competition is worth about £30 million a year to United.

SC Olhanense's playing budget next season will be £1.5m; considerably less than Jorge Mendes, Ronaldo's agent, will take home for a few weeks work. So the next time your Bank Manager, sorry Account Executive, tells you times are hard and that we are in the midst of a global recession you will be able to sleep comfortably knowing that at least one top sportsman is being helped by the banks.

CHRIS WRIGHT, Tavira

Advice from Snopes

By now, I suspect everyone is familiar with www.snopes.com and/or www.truthorfiction.com for determining whether information received via e-mail is just that: true/false or fact/fiction. Both are excellent sites. Below is their advice for us.

1) Any time you see an e-mail that says 'forward this on to 10 of your friends, sign this petition, or you'll get bad luck, good luck, or whatever', it almost always has an e-mail tracker program attached that tracks the cookies and e-mails of those folks you forward to. The host sender is getting a copy each time it gets forwarded and then is able to get lists of 'active' e-mails addresses to use in spam e-mails, or sell to other spammers.

2) Almost all e-mails that ask you to add your name and forward on to others are similar to that mass letter years ago that asked people to send business cards to the little kid in Florida who wanted to break the Guinness Book of Records for the most cards. All it was, and all any of this type of e-mail is, is a way to get names and 'cookie' tracking information for telemarketers and spammers — to validate active e-mail accounts for their own profitable purposes.

You can do your friends and family members a great favor by sending this information to them; you will be providing a service to your friends, and will be rewarded by not getting thousands of spam e-mails in the future!

If you have been sending out (forwarding) the above kinds of e-mail, now you know why you get so much spam.

Do yourself a favor and stop adding your name(s) to those types of listings regardless how inviting they might sound!

You may think you are supporting a great cause, but you are not in the long run. Instead, you will be getting tons of junk mail later! Plus, we are helping the spammers get rich! Let's don't make it easy for them.

Also: E-mail petitions are NOT acceptable to Congress or any other organization. To be acceptable, petitions must have a signed signature and full address of the person signing the petition.

LENNY NEWTON, By e-mail

UK local election results

SIR, The percentage of votes cast for the various parties in the recent UK local elections were not quite as Ron Lavery reports them (Letters, 20 June). The Liberal Democrats got 28% and Labour got 23%, not the other way round. The Liberal Democrats came second and Labour third. I suspect that Mr. Lavery is affected by the tendency of most of the British press to underrate the Liberal Democrats.

NORMAN WALKER, Moncarapacho

Re. expat's votes

SIR, Further to your feature about local politicians seeking expats' votes, I too have been approached to appear on an electoral list, and to enroll other expats to vote; very flattering until you realize that the problems facing the council in question are such that local means alone will never cover the costs of various works.

So this poses the obvious question: why bother at all?

The authorities in power at present do not seem to care about the state of the roads in our village (one half-kilometre section in particular is a natural form of traffic control: anything over 20kph and the car shakes itself to bits!), nor do they care about the number of empty properties that are a magnet to drug users and other unsavoury characters.

Taxing tourists might be a boon to places like Faro, Albufeira and Lagos, but in the hinterland, the few tourists who make it past the bad roads are only too happy to go as quickly as they arrived.

Until some money is made available from some central (European?) fund, very little will happen and another village in the Algarve will shrivel and die. This is unspeakably sad as the potential is tremendous and with the right objectives, so much could be achieved! However, bad roads and no parking will never attract people, nor make them spend their money in the shops and cafés... Let's hope that someone will see sense.

ANGRY RESIDENT, By e-mail

Algarve tourists to be taxed

SIR, In regards to June 20th article 'Algarve tourists to be taxed', I would like to know why just the tourists? There must be other ways of raising the supposed much needed cash, eg. wheel clamping for example. As most of us already know the majority of drivers in Portugal disobey the parking laws/rules on a regular basis, so why not bring in and enforce parking fines, and for serious parking offences wheel clamping. The council would surely be raking it in, in no time, especially [at] this time of year.

S.B., Messines

and Pensions could you not go some way to salvaging your conscience by extending the rules for the entitlement of Winter Fuel Payment to British non-UK-resident pensioners living in the EU to include those of us who left the UK prior to 5th January 1998?

Your readers will not be surprised to learn that Miss Winterton has chosen not to reply! I suggest that Mr. Walker's appeal for the Prime Minister's personal opinion will be similarly treated.

MICHAEL BAUGH, By e-mail

Here today, gone tomorrow...

SIR, For some time I have been noticing a retail phenomenon. Food products appear for a 'short run' and then are withdrawn for ever, like bad films. As I like some of these products this has been somewhat frustrating, particularly when asked to believe by the store manager that "the distributors just don't bring it anymore".

Have any of your readers experienced this problem? (It is closely connected with the extreme difficulty of finding decent low-salt foods in Portugal.)

RICHARD BARRY, By e-mail

Tourist

SIR, Commissions to Norman Walker on his response from Downing Street regarding the Winter Fuel Payment (Letters, 20th June). I received an identical reply to my letter on this subject to the then Minister of Work and Pensions, Malcolm Wicks, in 2004. The final paragraph of the reply Mr. Walker received is instructive: "...the Winter Fuel Payment... is both reasonable and lawful". What a hollow ring this statement has in the light of the Daily Telegraph's thoroughgoing exposure of the financial abuses committed by our political masters! With this in mind, on 29th May I e-mailed the Minister Work and Pensions, Rosie Winterton, now demoted, as follows:

'Dear Miss Winterton,

Now that it has emerged that you have liberally interpreted the allowance rules governing MPs' expenses with regard to your own claims, as Minister of Work

Readers need look no further than an item on the very next page. Some public official, who obviously marches to another drum beat, has proposed levying a small tax on tourists to offset the loss of revenue. What a brilliant piece of lateral thinking! That should dispel worries about the exchange rate and the cost of a round of golf and attract visitors by the shed load. Hotels and apartments will be overbooked again and the situation will be remedied in no time. It could well mark the start of Portugal's economic recovery. Does Portugal have the UK equivalent of an award for services to tourism?

Anti-whaling activists unveil 'Pirate Kangaroo' offensive against Japanese fleet

Forty volunteers from around the world will "risk their lives" later this year to try putting the Japanese whaling fleet "out of business", the head of the Sea Shepherd Conservation Society said on Wednesday.

"Our objective is to 'sink' the Japanese fleet from a business point of view", SSCS founder Paul Watson told journalists in the capital of Portugal's Madeira archipelago on the sidelines of a meeting of the International Whaling Commission.

Watson said that some 40 international volunteers, using two SSCS vessels, would try to block Japanese whalers in Antarctic waters between December and March.

"During the last three years, the Japanese gained no profit from this activity and the SSCS wants to guarantee that these losses continue in coming years because it's the only language that everyone understands: loss of profits", he said.

The new anti-whaling campaign was dubbed "Waltzing Matilda" and will use a "pirate kangaroo" logo to honour Australia's opposition to whaling, Watson said. (See also page 6 of this edition) TPN/Lusa

PROPERTY

A weekly guide to the latest and the best properties on the market in Portugal • The Portugal News • 27 Jun 2009

PROPERTY OF THE WEEK

A magnificent manor in the Western Algarve

Located in a quiet area between Lagos and Bensafrim this magnificent country estate comprises a spacious, four-bedroom villa, a separate, two-bedroom guest cottage, a heated pool, and is set in beautiful landscaped gardens with many palm and fruit trees on a plot of 15,600 square metres.

The property is approached by a private road and long driveway and has lovely country views. More exactly, it is situated about four kilometres from Lagos and the lovely beaches of Meia Praia and Praia da Luz.

The main villa comprise an entrance hall with cupboard, a guest toilet, a spacious living room with gas fireplace and double doors that lead into a dining room also with gas fireplace.

A fully fitted kitchen with breakfast area is a delight to cook meals in and there is a door to an outside breakfast/dining terrace, where those meals can be enjoyed whilst drinking in lovely views of the gardens and valley beyond.

There is a large equipped laundry/utility room, two large double bedrooms (on the ground floor) both with en-suite bathrooms and showers (one has a Jacuzzi), fitted wardrobes and doors to the garden.

A separate linen room is also home to the hot water boiler

On the first floor is another bedroom with en-suite bathroom, fitted wardrobes, air conditioning and a large private terrace.

A library/office space (which could be easily converted into bedroom number four) offers an extra living space, a peaceful retreat that has a gas fireplace, air conditioning and access to a large terrace.

In the attic room there are 'His & Hers' dressing rooms and a spacious south-facing roof terrace. All rooms have electric oil heaters.

Finishings throughout the property include burglar-proof double glazing, mains electricity and water, satellite TV, ADSL connection and security shutters on doors and windows. Furthermore there is a large double garage.

The detached guest cottage has an entrance hall with a cupboard, an open-plan living-dining room, a fully equipped kitchen with gas fireplace, two double bedrooms with fitted wardrobes, and a separate, shared bathroom. The basement comprises a garage plus a workshop. The guest cottage also has a large terrace and is to be sold with furniture included.

Both properties have access to a 12m x 5m heated pool, set in terraces between the main villa and guest cottage. An adjacent pool house houses a barbecue, bar, dressing room and shower room, the whole pool area being set in beautiful, fully fenced, landscaped gardens. There are picnic places in the formal and wild areas of the gardens, which are automatically irrigated using both borehole and cisterna water.

The property is served by mains drains and a fossa, there is bottled gas for domestic hot water, and it has the unusual, quaint feature of having its own old well.

It is currently priced at €1,600,000.

The sweet smell of success

Planting some highly-fragrant nemesia in pots on my patio recently made me start thinking about the importance of scent to a garden.

You can have wonderful aromas on your patio, or further up the garden the smell of deliciously-perfumed shrubs can fill the air.

If you only have room for one large scented plant at the back of your border, make it a mock orange (philadelphus), whose white flowers appear in profusion in June and July and whose rich orange-blossom fragrance can be enjoyed from a good distance away in the warm summer evenings.

It grows to around six feet (1.8 metres), although dwarf and taller varieties are available. It is easy to grow almost anywhere - in poor soil, salt-laden air or other inhospitable environments - but for the best results give it a sunny spot.

Of course, the obvious suspects to include in your scented scheme are honeysuckles and lilacs, which will have a more intoxicating fragrance grown within an arbour or sheltered patio than in windy, exposed sites. Roses, too, provide a heady perfume.

Position fragrant blooms where they will be most appreciated. Visitors can brush against low hedges of lavender on a garden path, and pots of fragrant annuals such as the trailing Surfinia 'Blue Vein' can be mounted on walls at sniffing height, while night-scented stocks and nicotiana planted below a window will create a wonderful scent indoors on summer evenings.

Dianthus, a genus which incorporates pinks, border carnations and sweet Williams, can also add the exotic aroma of cloves, while border phlox (Phlox paniculata) flowers from mid-summer to autumn and generates a delicious perfume.

Many herbs are also wonderfully aromatic as well as decorative. Thyme can trail over walls in rockeries or scree beds, rosemary has fantastic silver-grey, needle-like leaves and sage, basil and mint also add their own scent.

Conifers can also provide scent as well as height and year-round interest. Cupressus Goldcrest Wilma, an evergreen conifer with bright green, lemon-scented foliage, is often bought small to add height and foliage contrast to both summer and winter pots, although if planted out its eventual height will be six feet.

Each year I plant wigwams of sweet peas both in my borders and in patio pots, which will give me fabulous colour and scent throughout the summer. You need to cut them regularly to produce more flowers throughout the season, so it's a double whammy as the smell of bunches of colourful sweet-peas permeates through the house as well.

Roses, honeysuckle and sweetpeas are the most obvious choices for your scented garden.

Many aromatic plants require full sun and can tolerate drought conditions, such as scented geraniums, whose leaves emit an enticing aroma. Mediterranean plants often like well-drained, gritty soil and a sunny aspect, so if you have heavy soil you may be better off raising the planting area to improve drainage and also bring the plants with their flowers and foliage closer to the nose.

Scent doesn't have to be confined to summer. Spring charms include lilacs, daphnes and viburnums, while many spring-flowering bulbs, including hyacinths and some narcissi, are also fragrant.

And if you want to prolong your scented summer garden into autumn, plant foliage shrubs such as Elaeagnus pungens 'Maculata', which produces fragrant small white flowers.

Hannah Stephenson

From plot to plate

you leave the matured radishes in the ground for too long they soon become woody and inedible. Choose a sunny spot in soil which has been enriched with compost and rake the surface to a fine tilth. Summer varieties don't need thinning much, but do protect them against birds, hoe regularly to keep down weeds. Pull them when the round ones are around 2.5cm across. Japanese types can be left until they are around 1.5cm long. Good varieties include Cherry Belle, which is red with a mild flavour and are slow to go woody, and 'Sparkler', which is red with a white patch at the root and is very quick maturing.

Radish (Raphanus sativus)

If you want to get your kids interested in gardening, then radishes are among the easiest veg to grow, producing hot, colourful salad additions about a month after sowing. You can sow them every two weeks to provide a continuous crop through summer. If

Decorate your home's exterior walls

Get those jobs done with a little help from DIY guru Julia Gray. This week: decorating those exterior walls.

Top tips for... painting exterior walls

Don't go up the ladder unless you're comfortable doing so, and be sure to take all the safety precautions listed below. If you feel safer with someone holding the bottom of the ladder, wait until there's someone available who can.

• Start by erecting the ladder correctly - for every four metres you extend it, it should be one metre away from the house, forming a 75-degree angle. The ladder should also sit on flat, level ground that's firm and stable.

• Follow the manufacturer's instructions carefully for the masonry paint or exterior emulsion you're using, and ensure each coat is completely dry before doing another. Remember, the perfect conditions for this job are dry, warm but overcast weather - start as early as possible to make the most of the day.

• Unless you live in a bungalow, you'll need a long ladder to reach the house's upper floors.

Seasonal task...

If you have decking in your garden, clean it off with a medium to heavy-duty (110-130 bar) pressure washer. When the wood is dry, apply a couple of coats of decking treatment or oil, if necessary, to keep it looking good and wearing well for summer.

Three ways to... stop a child lying.

A mother talking about lying with her daughter.

1. Don't allow activities such as watching TV, chatting on the phone, sports etc until homework is completed satisfactorily.

2. Set a specific time for homework to be done every night.

3. Encourage your child and help her where permitted, show interest in what she's doing and look over her finished work.

Most UK family time is spent watching TV, but children would rather do exercise such as cycling with their parents, a new study has found.

A survey of more than 1,000

Instead of punishing a toddler, try redirecting him by replacing unwanted behaviour with an acceptable behaviour. So if he's throwing a ball in the house and he shouldn't be, for example, take him outside to throw it.

News for parents

Lisa Salmon looks at the weird, wonderful and sometimes weary world of parenting.

Children's favourite playground clapping and skipping activities will be turned into Nintendo-style computer games as part of a new project.

Three English universities have teamed up with the British Library and gaming giant Nintendo to develop the prototype games, which will be similar to Wii Sports.

Researchers will use recordings of playground games and songs held in archives at the British Library, and also collect current examples direct from today's school playgrounds.

These will be used to create prototype games that can be played on a games console.

But why can't kids just go outside and actually do the real thing? Are some of them allergic to exercise?

Acupuncture can help relieve the symptoms of indigestion in pregnancy, new research suggests.

A small study involving 36 women found "significant improvements" among those treated with acupuncture.

Digestive disorders are one of the most frequent complaints in pregnancy, with 45% to 80% of women reporting problems such as heartburn, pain or discomfort, regurgitation, belching and bloating.

Researchers from Sao Paulo University in Brazil studied women aged 15 to 39 who were 15 to 30 weeks pregnant.

They found that average heartburn intensity fell by at least a half in 15 out of 20 (75%) women receiving acupuncture, compared with seven out of 16 (44%) women not receiving it.

The trouble is, if it's a straight choice between getting heartburn or having needles stuck in them, some women might choose heartburn.

Ask the Expert

Q: "My daughter has just taken her A-levels and wants to go to university, but is worried sick, like us, about how we'll fund it.

Have you got any tips?"

A: Lyndi Smith, who's just written a book about raising £25,000 (£32,116) to fund her own degree, says: "Relax. There's no need for you to re-mortgage the house or let your daughter graduate with £30,000 (38,540) worth of debt."

"In 1998 I raised over £25,000 (£32,116) to fund my place at the Royal Academy of Dramatic Art. I didn't qualify for a grant or a student loan, and my family couldn't afford to pay for me. I raised everything I needed with the support of family, friends and my local youth theatre."

"To start, find out what help you're entitled to from Direct.gov.uk's Student Finance. Also contact the university for details of their bursaries and scholarships."

"Calculate exactly how much her total expenses will be, including rent, food, travel, equipment and tuition fees. Work out how much she needs to raise after grants and other awards, and this is your target."

"Your fundraising campaign should include applying to charities, writing to individuals, gaining business sponsorship, and running charity events. You don't need to raise every penny before she starts, just enough for the first year. Holiday times can be used for future fundraising efforts."

"It helps to create a leaflet you can send out explaining your daughter's situation. My website www.degreesforfree.com has a sample leaflet you can download."

"I have also written a book on how to find charities, seek out business sponsors, run charity events and raise funds for your education."

Face facts with the beauty champions

In today's fame-obsessed culture, celebrity-endorsed products are becoming more and more prominent on the beauty shelves.

Girl band The Saturdays have recently signed up as the legs of Veet, Lisa Snowdon is swishing her locks for Schwarzkopf and actress Freida Pinto is the new face of L'Oréal.

But forget the big campaigns, what are celebrities really reaching for in their designer make-up at home?

It's time to take a peek into the bathroom cabinets of the famous.

Rachel Stevens, Singer and face of Schwarzkopf Gliss

Routine: "I'm quite good with cleansing, toning and moisturising daily. As you get older you look after your skin more and I've started using preventative anti-wrinkle creams. If I'm not working, it's nice to have a day off from hair and make-up, which is usually when the paparazzi catch you!"

Make-up Musts: MAC Face & Body Foundation, Bourjois mascara, Clarins lipgloss.

Bathroom Essential: Dead Sea Spa Magik Salt Brushing Scrub makes your skin really soft for summer.

Latest Discovery: "I've done a lot of shoots recently and my hair's become quite dry so I've been using Gliss Total Repair Conditioner."

Hair Care: "I've got quite fine hair, but lots of it, so I can't use any products that weigh it down."

Insider Secret: "I've been taught how to use shimmer in secret little places that highlight your face and accentuate your features."

Signature Fragrance: Narciso Rodriguez For Her.

Beauty Disaster: "A corkscrew perm in the 80s. It was all the rage then!"

Colour or Neutrals: "I go for really strong eyes and neutral glossy lips but I like to be creative with colour in photo shoots."

Best Feature: "I always accentuate my eyes with lots of lashes."

On Strictly: "I loved the make-up on Strictly Come Dancing. My favourite look on the show was quite Seventies-inspired with strong gold and bronze glitter."

Jenni Falconer, TV
presenter and face of Disaronno Boutique Parasol campaign

Routine: "I start and end each day by cleansing, toning and moisturising. I use Bobbi Brown cleanser and toner and Skin Nutrition serum, moisturiser and exfoliator. I try and give myself home facials a couple of nights a week."

Make-up Musts: Bobbi Brown Eye Brightener, Nars Orgasm/Laguna Highlighting Blush Duo, Givenchy Phenomen'eyes Mascara.

Bathroom Essential: Skin Nutrition Complexion Revitalizing Serum is an allrounder must.

It works as a face moisturiser, after sun, on nails and on stretch marks."

Latest Discovery: "Elemis Pro-Collagen Radiantly Smooth Body Cream - really makes your body feel smooth and it's anti-ageing too."

Hair Care: "I have a highlighted bob that's layered and undercut. My style's easily maintained - I wash it every morning but can dry it quickly because it's very straight naturally."

Insider Secret: "A white or light, pale blue line on the bottom inner lid of the eye will open your eyes and make you look more awake - perfect after a late night."

Signature Fragrance: "I've worn Thierry Mugler Angel for years."

Colour or Neutrals: "I tend to use neutrals on most occasions but sometimes, if I'm going out, I'll add bold colour. I have some fab green Suqqu eyeshadow."

Best Feature: "I'm told by make-up artists my eyes are good because they can take different colours. I know my feet are my least favourite!"

Spa Treatment: "I visit Cowshed for manicures and pedicures when I can and I also like Elemis treatments if I have time for relaxation."

The stars give the low-down to Lisa Haynes on their beauty routines and must-haves.

The sandal season is

Summer's here and it's time to get out those toes, but embarrassing corns and yellowing toenails can put you off flashing your flesh in sandals and flip flops. We ask the experts how to get feet healthy and ready to go on show.

Give your feet a holiday - a little pampering, fresh air and sunshine will not go unrewarded.

This summer's set to be a scorcher. But before you think about flashing some flesh and putting those feet on display, take a good look at them. After months of wedging our toes into tight winter boots and shoes, many people will have forgotten what their feet look like. The thought of wearing sandals and flip flops might fill them with dread - especially those who suffer from verrucas, or unsightly bunions.

But the summer doesn't have to be scary if you start looking after your feet, says the Society of Chiropodists and Podiatrists.

June marks the society's Feet For Life Month, so there's no better time to give those neglected toes some TLC.

:: Wear the right shoes

Most foot problems are caused by wearing ill-fitting shoes, so make sure you dress your feet for the right occasion, says podiatrist Alicia Lai.

"In summer, people love to wear flip flops and sandals, but they don't provide much support. You've got to match the shoe to the activity you're doing.

"High-heeled shoes are great for going out, but they put pressure on the ball of the foot and squeeze the toes together, so don't wear them if you're walking long distances," Lai advises.

"Women love wearing ballerina flats these days for commuting, but they have zero support on them. We often find that having a slight wedge or heel to the shoe is better. It releases tension off the ball of the foot and ligaments."

When you're sightseeing on holiday this summer, try not to wear slip-on shoes if you're going to be walking for hours.

"In slip-ons, your feet have to work harder to keep the shoe on, so look for stability features, like something that wraps around the back of the heel."

For comfort and a mini workout when you walk, why not try a pair of FitFlops, from £44, www.fitflop.com, or Sole sandals, from £49, www.yoursole.co.uk.

:: Say goodbye to smelly feet

The average pair of feet produce half a pint of sweat a day, according to the Society of Chiropodists and Podiatrists, so it's no wonder they smell!

Following a simple footcare routine can help cut down the sweating, says Lai.

"Letting your feet breathe is always a good thing, so in summer wear sandals, and make sure you alternate shoes daily so they're allowed to dry out.

"Gently wash your feet and moisturise daily. Use a mild soap and warm water, rinse well and dry thoroughly, especially between the toes."

Make sure you change those socks or tights every day to keep your toes fresh and prevent odours from building up.

Lai says if you're wearing socks, choose natural fibres like cotton.

Invest in a foot deodorant, such as Flexitol Foot De-Odour, Boots and Waitrose, or try Fragrant Footings Scented Insoles, www.relax-uk.com.

:: Banish those blisters

Blisters are a common summer problem, and happen when we dig out our summer shoes and then have to 'wear them in' all overagain.

If your shoes start to rub, fluid will build up between the layers of the skin to act as a buffer in order to prevent further damage.

Lai says: "In summer, people start wearing flip flops, which rub between the toes, they often don't wear hosiery or socks, so blisters can be more of an issue."

"If you do have a blister, then obviously follow the usual footcare, and cushion it by popping plasters on to avoid the rub. It should heal in time, but if you're worried, seek attention."

Try Carnation's Anti-Blister Stick, and Carnation Invisibliss Plasters. For stockists, visit www.carnationfootcare.co.uk.

:: Cure cracked heels

When your feet are open to the elements in sandals and flip flops, they're more likely to dry out.

Open-backed summer shoes, which rub around the edge of the heel, can cause dry heels to crack and become quite sore.

Podiatrist Lorraine Jones advises moisturising twice a day to prevent heels from cracking, and using a pumice stone or non-metal foot-file in the shower or bath to exfoliate any build-up of skin.

"If the problem worsens, you may need to seek help from a podiatrist," she adds.

"In some more severe cases, strapping may be used to 'hold' the cracks together while they heal and insoles may be used to alter the way you walk to prevent the thick skin from developing."

Invest in a good foot cream, like E45 Foot & Heel Cream, Boots, and use a file after bathing, like Kiss Pedicure File, Boots.

:: In-growing toenails

Tight shoes can press on the edges of toenails and cause them to start growing inwards.

The skin around a toenail will get sore and red. Ignoring it could end in surgery to remove part of the nail.

"People love to dig down the sides of their nails and leave sharp edges, which makes the nail grow inwards," says Lai.

"Always cut the nail straight across and avoid tight shoes, which squash the toes together.

For comfort and a mini work-out when you walk, why not try a pair of FitFlops.

If the problem keeps happening, see a podiatrist."

Clip your nails into shape with Ms Pedicure Toenail Clipper, Boots.

:: Bunions and corns

Bunions and corns can often develop together - and when you're wearing sandals and flip flops they might be embarrassing.

"Bunions usually happen in the joint of the big toe and are more of a structural deformity, where the first big-toe bone moves to the right or left. They can be painful and cause difficulty fitting into shoes," says Lai.

If you're having problems with a bunion, see a podiatrist, who may prescribe orthotic devices - supports which go in shoes - to stabilise the joints.

A build-up of hard skin, known as a corn, might develop where your shoes rub on the bunion.

"Pumicing gently can help, but if it becomes a problem, then see a podiatrist to treat it," says Lai.

Try Ms Pedicure Natural Pumice Stone, Boots.

:: Verrucas and Athlete's Foot

If you're spending lots of time at public swimming pools this summer, beware of catching verrucas or Athlete's Foot.

While verrucas are a virus and Athlete's Foot is a fungus, they both get passed around in moist areas, like the floors of swimming-pool changing rooms, so it's a good idea to wear flip flops to and from the pool.

"Verrucas are warts that grow on the soles of your feet, they can grow large and painful and spread," says Lai. "I've seen 42 verrucas on one person. Get them frozen off with liquid nitrogen by a podiatrist or treat them yourself."

Rub the skin with a pumice stone, before applying a gel or cream from your pharmacist, such as Bazuka Sub-Zero.

Athlete's Foot thrives in the warm sweaty bits between your toes, making your skin itchy and flaky.

"It doesn't mean you're unhygienic, because you catch it in communal areas. Treat it as soon as you can with natural products like tea-tree oil, and let your feet breathe in sandals."

If untreated, the fungus can spread to your toenails, making them yellow, thick and flaky.

Madeleine Walker

This lovely lady Madeleine, spent a very busy time in The Algarve running her courses and also giving one to one consultation. I am sure that she could have booked out many more weeks helping people and animals alike. Lots of money was raised and most importantly so many people were treated to time with Madeleine, a special lady.

Thank you so much to Zena Camp and her band of many other kind people, who together spent a lot of time arranging this event, which was held at Zena's house.

Just to recap Madeleine Walker works internationally running clinics, performing readings, and facilitating courses in animal communication and healing. During Madeleine Walker's experiences with the animals that she works with she finds herself totally engulfed in the love that emanates from our animal friends. Madeleine works with all animals from horses, cats and dogs, to birds, dolphins, and even guinea pigs! An Exchange of Love, is the philosophy taught by Madeleine Walker.

Cleo and Merlin visited her and it was an emotional experience—it has taught me to view those two dogs of mine differently and to look into their eyes to try and work out for myself what they are trying to tell me!! Perhaps it has also taught me that perhaps I should listen to what they say as well!! I also wish I had taken my Chloe

Hi There !

All the dogs mentioned here have been in rescue kennels for quite some time either because they were abandoned by original owners or found wandering in a terrible condition or rescued at the last moment from being put to sleep in municipal kennels. We understand it's a big step to take on a dog and that times are hard for people now as well as dogs, but if you can't give one of our orphans a full time home maybe you could foster or sponsor one which would give them a break from kennel life and more importantly, someone to give affection and time. Have a think about it and give us a call on 918217242 or 282687334.

Ricky, 1yr old and full of joy for life will fill your life with fun if you give him a chance! Neutered, vaccinated and ready to go!

Ramsey the 3yr old Ridgeback needs a loving home where he can forget his unhappy past. Neutered & vaccinated.

2yr old brother & sister Pistol & Ulrika love children and desperately want to be part of a family again, both neutered & vaccinated.

Cimco is a big softy, laddie only 8 months old. He loves cuddles and kisses and wants to be someone's special boy. Neutered & vaccinated.

JOANINHA was thrown out of a car on the national road at the age of 5 months. The person driving a car behind stopped and took her to Bianca shelter. Now, she is 10 months old, gentle and playful, sterilised and small – she weighs only 11 kgs. She gets along with other dogs, but she does not like cats. If you would like to give her a home, please contact Bianca on:

Live the high life in luxurious LA

Santa Monica is ideal for families or couples, as it has lots of opportunities for sport, good places to eat to fit every budget and marvellous shopping for WAGS, with loads of stores within walking distance of the seafront.

Until recently I was proud of budget globe-trotting - doing everything on a shoestring, with enough left over for bargain buys in the departure lounge. But, after a recent foray into the world of Posh and Becks et al, my head has been well and truly turned.

My trip to that mecca of showbiz, Los Angeles, began with a limo arriving at my humble Essex abode to whisk me to Heathrow.

Once through the dedicated security channel, I went pronto to the flagship Virgin Clubhouse. No battling the crowds and queues for the new VIP-me. Instead of my usual schlep around the shops, I relaxed with a complimentary coiffure in the clubhouse salon before entering the hitherto unknown world of upper-class flying. I may need counselling the next time I go economy.

On arrival at LAX airport, I felt as fresh as a newly-minted starlet. Shuttle bus from the airport? I don't think so! Yet another limo whisked me and my companions to Santa Monica, a favourite seaside haunt of the rich and famous.

Location is all. One simply must holiday where one can step straight from one's hotel onto the beach and dabble one's tootsies in the Pacific. Staying at either Shutters On The Beach Hotel or Casa del Mar next to it fits the bill perfectly. I got the opulent Casa del Mar, with my own private terrace. It was also very stressful, trying to ignore the huge four-poster bed. I still had a full day ahead because of the time difference. But the show must go on!

I quickly donned my swim gear and plunged immediately into the Californian lifestyle. The atmosphere of Santa Monica is laid-back and full of character, some of it wonderfully quirky. Soak it all up with a walk along the sand to the historic pier.

All around you, locals and visitors alike are running, swimming, bulking up those muscles, playing volleyball, surfing or just catching some rays. However what impressed me most in my new celebrity mode was the beachside butler service - everything you need without having to lift a finger. So LA, dahling!

For calorie-burning, rather unusual activities include taking a trapeze lesson on the pier or joining a free session of comedy/yoga on the beach right by the edge of the ocean.

Teacher Vanda - email her at vandayoga@hotmail.com - keeps everyone laughing with her quickfire wit. I tried not to be distracted by a passing school of dolphins just yards away, or by wondering whether it was true that the large gathering of folk nearby really was a meeting of Cocaine Users Anonymous! Surreal.

Now that my weight had plummeted, it was time for lunch at a famous eatery close to the pier. Try the Lobster seafood restaurant for, well, its delicious lobster. It also serves up bowls of ultra-skimmy, to-die-for fries.

How do you fill in a couple of après-lunch hours before the obligatory cocktail hour? The answer in this part of the world is beauty treatments, and lots of them. What I really needed was a spot of liposuction, but instead I happily settled for a distinctly A-list facial using lymphatic drainage and sound-wave techniques.

Emerging blissed-out from my spa session, I was described as looking "dewy", which set me off smirking like an idiot. It was certainly a case of "Mr De Mille, I am ready for my close-up".

It is a fascinating eye-opener seeing how the other half lives, particularly in LA. I was only there for three nights and it has provided me with dinner party tales ever since, though sadly, I didn't spot a single celebrity.

At The Peninsula hotel, frequented by many famous guests, even the bedding is monogrammed. I thought the fact that I had CG on my pillow was simply a coincidence!

You will find plenty to see in LA. A good way to see the sights, including the famous 'Hollywood' sign, is an organised tour. Apparently one of the best areas for spotting screen icons is West Hollywood, where they often hang out. There are plenty of art and design shops, and galleries. For designer goodies, no trip to LA is complete without a mooch along Rodeo Drive, even if you only window-shop.

I succumbed to the joy that is the spa in The Peninsula and had a manicure and pedicure with a lovely glass of ice-cold pink champers. Trust me, you will become obsessed very quickly with grooming.

By the way girls, if you are going to LA, make sure you take your heels and frocks. Everyone makes an effort when going out for dinner. Always ask the hotel to get you on the list for one of the hottest clubs or a restaurant booking. In LA, the place to be seen seems to change weekly.

And so, with my lovely sparkly nails and plumped-up skin, I came back to chilly old UK and normality with a bump. Now, where are those Marigolds - mustn't break a nail...

Travel facts

Full Upper-Class fare Heathrow-LA is £3,515/€4,101, incl. taxes and charges, limo and from airport at both ends. Upper-Class Wing (with private security corridor) at Heathrow, LHR Clubhouse with complimentary beauty treatments plus access to Clubhouse at LAX and priority boarding. # TRANSFORMERS

REVENGE OF THE FALLEN

Transformers: Revenge of the Fallen is the sequel to 2007's Transformers, which was the first live action Transformers film. Michael Bay and Steven Spielberg return respectively as director and executive producer, while Shia LaBeouf reprises the role of Sam Witwicky, the human caught in the war between Autobots and Decepticons. The film's theme is described as "being away from home", with the Autobots contemplating living on Earth as they cannot restore Cybertron, while Sam goes to college. The movie introduces many more robots and the scope has been expanded to numerous countries, most notably France and Egypt. Among the filming locations are the Giza pyramid complex and Luxor. The shoot was highly secretive and remarkably smooth. Bay earned the Egyptian government's approval to film at the pyramids by contacting Zahi Hawass, who Bay recalled "put his arm around me and said,

'Don't hurt my pyramids'. Filming also took place in Jordan, the Royal Jordanian Air Force aided in filming at Petra, Wadi Rum and Salt because one of the country's princes liked the first film.

TRANSFORMERS

REVENGE OF THE FALLEN

Autobots

- * Peter Cullen voices Optimus Prime, the Autobot leader.
- * Bumblebee, the Autobot who befriended Sam. Bumblebee's voice is still malfunctioning, and he still uses radio soundbites to express some of his emotions.
- * Jess Harnell voices Ironhide, the Autobot weapons specialist.
- * Robert Foxworth voices Ratchet, the Autobot medic.
- * Mark Ryan voices Jetfire, a former Decepticon. His wounds and age have made him choose to become an Autobot. The writers wanted a geriatric robot, and they gave Jetfire that personality. He creaks and does not transform well. Also, he walks with a cane, which doubles as a battle axe.
- * Grey DeLisle voices Arcee, a single consciousness driving three female Transformers that transform into motorcycles.
- * Rena Wilson and Tom Kenny voice Mudflap and Skids respectively, also known as The Twins. Mudflap is very hyperactive, while Skids believes himself to be the smarter of the two and tries to come across as mature, but nevertheless appears unable to keep quiet.
- * Tom Kenny also voices Wheelie, a blue radio-controlled toy monster truck. Wheelie initially serves the Decepticons, but because he is frightened of them he joins the Autobots.

Cast and characters:

Humans

* Shia LaBeouf plays Sam Witwicky. In this movie, Sam is trying to get some personal development, and have a normal life. While at college, Sam starts having mental flashes about Cybertronian symbols, so now the Decepticons are after him to get the information.

* Megan Fox plays Mikaela Banes, Sam's girlfriend. Fox had lost a lot of weight for her role in Jennifer's Body, and had to gain weight before filming Transformers 2. She explained "Director Michael Bay doesn't like skinny girls."

* Josh Duhamel plays Major William Lennox, U.S. Army Ranger and ally of the Autobots. Lennox has become part of NEST, an international taskforce battling Decepticons alongside the Autobots.

* Tyrese Gibson plays Robert Epps, a U.S. Army Ranger and a member of NEST.

* John Turturro plays Seymour Simmons, former agent of the terminated Sector 7 unit, which monitored Transformer activity on Earth. Sam enlists his aid. Turturro was allowed to climb the real pyramids during filming.

* Ramón Rodríguez plays Leo Spitz, Sam's college roommate who owns a website on conspiracy theories.

* Matthew Marsden plays Graham, an agent of the fictional SASF, and a member of the UK Special Forces who joins NEST. Marsden grew up reading the comics and loved the first film. Bay was impressed with his audition and decided to increase the character's screentime.

HIGHLIGHTS*Have you experienced the magic of FIESA?

Now in its 6th year FIESA, the world's largest sand sculpture exhibition, is this summer bringing the magic of historical discoveries to life with gigantic sculptures of famous 'lightbulb moments' and the people responsible for them, like Benjamin Franklin, Freud, Louis Pasteur, and Leonardo da Vinci.

The fascinating 'sand city' is painstakingly hand-carved by 60 talented sculptors, from 35,000 tons of sand, covering 15,000 square meters of land in Algoz.

Imposing by day and amazing by night, when lighting and sounds give the exhibition an enchanted feel, it will be open until October 22nd, everyday from 10h00 to 21h00.

Wandering round FIESA is an amazing experience and you will be mind-blown by the moments of great discoveries re-created in sand, like when the press was born, when TV, radio and gramophones became household commodities, when Darwin announced his theory of evolution, maritime explorations, discovery of fire, writing and the wheel.

DNA, mechanics, astronomy, man's voyage to the moon, the zeppelin, Wall Street, recycling and architecture are just a few other scenes that make up this year's 'Discoveries' exhibition.

Other activities organized as part of the exhibition include bungee jumping, arts and crafts tents, and a snack bar. During summer evenings there will be live entertainment.

Entry fees cost €8 per adult, €4,50 per child (under 5s free) and special conditions and discounts for groups of six or over apply.

For more information or directions, contact FIESA on: (+351) 969 459 259 / 61, or email: fiesa@prosandart.com.

Alternatively, for a sneak preview, see website: www.fiesa.org.

SANTARÉM - July 17 & 31 - Music & Dance Summer School
- The 3rd edition of Music & Dance Summer School is held this year in Santarém, in the former School Escola Prática de Cavalaria de Santarém, with the support of the City Hall between 17th and 31st July. The Music & Dance Summer School is an internship/training for young musicians and dancers from various parts of the country. Its main objective focuses on young people to increase the techniques and quality, stimulating their interest in music/dance creating an interaction between the two disciplines. The Music & Dance Summer School is mainly composed of 3 different courses: Orchestra Class, Classical Dance Class and Music Class, being an intensive training with a duration of 15 days (on an internship). The Stage will also be complemented by workshops devoted to the 3 areas of the course, such as: Computer Music; sequencing on Music & Technology, Hip-Hop, Contemporary Dance, choreographic composition, Yoga, Jazz Dance, Theater, among others. The course will culminate with a Seminar and presentation on Largo Santarém, July 31 by 21h00, (Free), incorporating the various classes of Orchestra, Classical Dance and Music together in one show, where the musicians and dancers will present their final work. During the internship students will have various leisure activities and study visits to various cultural facilities in the city of Santarém. Pick of the Day

ITV1

CSI: NY (five, 9.30pm)

It just wouldn't be CSI: NY without at least one beloved member of the team dying in a hail of bullets in a blisteringly exciting series finale. And tonight is no exception, as the fifth series of the terrific spin-off show comes to an end. Flack is giving confidential informant Terrence Davis (guest star Nelly) his dispensation papers when he is interrupted by Angell calling to arrange their latest date. Just as she tells him she is escorting Connor Dunbrook to testify against his father in court, a truck slams into the diner where she and Connor are eating and shots are fired. Flack races to the scene and finds Angell has been gunned down. Despite all efforts to save her, her injuries are too severe. 'She's gone,' a devastated Flack tells Danny at the hospital. Convinced Dunbrook is somehow implicated in his son's abduction and Angell's murder, Mac orders Adam to place a bug under his car. Back at the lab, Hawkes analyses hair from the truck and discovers it belongs to a bat suffering from a fungal infection called white nose'. Back at his office, Dunbrook shows the team a tape of the kidnapper sent him, demanding a ransom in return for Connor's life. Mac notices one of the kidnapper's hands is visible on the tape and magnifies the fingerprint. He is able to identify the culprit as a man named Simon Cade, a soldier previously stationed in Iraq who was brought on manslaughter charges. 'I want that face on every newspaper and TV in the city,' says Mac. Can the CSIs bring Angell's killers to justice?

Pick of the Day

On Thin Ice (BBC2, 8pm)

Ben Fogle is not the sort of bloke to let a flesh-eating bug stand in the way of his dreams. When he picked up a nasty case of Leishmaniasis Vienna while filming BBC Two series Extreme Dreams in Peru, it could have been enough to make him want to settle for an easier life. However, Fogle is made of sterner stuff and pressed on with the South Pole Race, a challenge that involves ski-racing 480 miles while pulling a 150lb sled in temperatures as low as minus 50C. Together with friend and Olympian rower James Cracknell among others, they attempted to overcome personal problems as well as cope with some of the harshest conditions on Earth. Their efforts are documented in this compelling new five-part series. In episode one, the pair kick off their training at The Great North Run, recruit a third team-mate and spend 24 hours in a climatic chamber where they experience the extreme cold for the first time. Thankfully Ben is on the road to recovery after his assorted problems: "We kind of came back battered and bruised, I had frostbite on my nose, which luckily, has cleared up because, certainly at one stage, I thought I was going to lose part of it." After seeing what else he and Cracknell go through, you'll be amazed they made it back in one piece.

Fifth Gear (five, 8pm)
It's no wonder the Fifth Gear team always seem in a sprightly mood considering they get paid to race around in the latest top-of-the-range motors that most of us can only dream of owning. This week, Jonny Smith has extra reason to be cheerful — he's in retro heaven when he gets to hit the road in the Ecto-1, more commonly known as the original Ghostbusters ambulance. Former Most Haunted star Derek Acorah answers the call for a driving companion, and the pair take a drive in search of the paranormal, before spending the night on one of the most haunted rooms in England. While Jonny is busy being scared out of his wits, Jason Plato has his hands full test driving two recently revised convertibles. The Mini Cooper and the Mazda MX-5 have had radical revamps so Jason takes them to the track to see which sporty little number comes out on top. Meanwhile, Tim Shaw takes his car to a garage where there are no mechanics. The Pit Start has all the equipment of a typical repair shop, but the drivers do all the work themselves at a fraction of the cost. Elsewhere, Tom Ford test Toyota's new miniature SUV - the Urban Cruiser, and Tiff puts the new Aston Martin V12 Vantage through its paces.

CSI: Miami (five, 9pm)

Any fans who hate spoilers should probably look away now, but with Britain nine months behind the US — not to mention all the cliffhanger-trashing promotional material that's out there — it's no secret that Horatio Caine isn't really dead. However, when this new seventh season kicks off, the team has no idea. Calleigh and Delko race to a Miami airfield after hearing that their colleague has been shot, and by the time they arrive, Ryan reveals that Horatio is no more. The pair are angry, and perhaps correctly suspicious, that Ryan has already released the body and Calleigh swears that they will find out who is responsible for their friend's apparent demise — no matter what. However, when she digs deep she discovers a disturbing link to ATF Agent Evan Caldwell and none other than Ryan Wolfe himself. Confronted, Ryan has no choice but to reveal that Horatio, having heard old foe Juan Ortega has put a hit on him, asked Caldwell and her to help him fake his own death. Meanwhile, the undercover Horatio puts his life on the line for real as he tries to prove his ex-girlfriend's new husband is selling dangerous fused-alloy bullets.

The Bill (ITV1 Granada, 8pm)

The Sun Hill cops face one of their trickiest cases to date as a six-part storyline kicks off. Outside a busy E&B bar, Sergeant Smith (Alex Walkinshaw) and his officers try to break up a street fight and discover badly beaten Andy Brennan (Jack Dearn) lying alone in a nearby alleyway. Elsewhere, Sergeant Stone (Sam Callis) investigates a break-in at Oliver Robinson's (Anthony Flanagan) house, where a watch worth £9,000 has been stolen. Back at the station, the Sergeant realise their cases are connected when the missing watch is found on Andy. Alex Walkinshaw, who has spent a decade playing Dale 'Smithy' Smith, admits he's rather excited about this new story: "There's a real moral dilemma for Smithy and how he deals with it or chooses to deal with it or not to deal with it," he explains. "You've got two simple stories that then collide and become one story, and out of that story we then meet some rather large éthiqu." Will Smithy and company crack the case? There's a chance to find out as the storyline continues on Thursday night.

Gerry's Big Decision (C4, 8pm)

It's a tough time for Britain's small businesses, but it seems a saviour could be at hand in the shape of Gerry Robinson. The respected entrepreneur is preparing to go behind the scenes of some failing companies to see where they are going wrong, but unlike some other TV experts, he won't just be dispensing tough advice and then leaving. If the bosses can convince him their business is worth saving, he'll be putting his own money where his mouth is and investing — which means the stakes are even higher if the owners then fail to turn the venture around. In the first episode, Gerry turns his attention to two couples who have started their own award-winning breweries, but are now facing last orders. One duo mortgaged their home to achieve their dreams, and now risk losing everything if they can't get back on track, while the other business is in such a precarious state, they have even stopped producing beer. Gerry submerges himself in both companies to try to uncover their strengths and weaknesses, but will anyone be drinking a toast to him at the end of the episode?

Our Father Hears

Our church family is growing as some of the young couples welcome babies into their homes. Still other new families who already have little ones have started coming to the church, toddlers in tow. As a grandmother whose grandchildren live across the ocean, I enjoy observing these young families who arrive each Sunday with their lively, excited children. I've noticed that occasionally a child is reluctant to leave his or her parent's side to go downstairs with the other children. However, once they are convinced to do so they soon find that they enjoy the nursery or classes for young children much more than they would like sitting silently through the adult worship service.

It impressed me that this is an accurate picture of our heavenly father. Though we are many, His ear is tuned to the cries of His children. He recognizes our voices and the cries of our hearts. No cry of either delight or despair falls on deaf ears. God hears and He cares. Over and over again the Psalmists remind us of this truth. So go ahead and cry out to Him. He is not annoyed by our cries for help, for He is our Father and stands ready to give comfort and support.

"Evening, morning and noon I cry out in distress, and he hears my voice." Psalm 55:17

Back to school with AIA Racing School

On Friday 19th June the Algarve International Racetrack (AIA) in Portimão officially inaugurated the AIA Racing School. Driving enthusiasts can now have exhilarating driving experiences on track and also learn crucial racing techniques from worldly renowned drivers on one of the most technically demanding tracks in the world.

With the inauguration of the AIA Racing School you can now drive your dream car on one of the most technologically advanced tracks in the world without having to travel abroad.

The brand new AIA Racing School has several courses available for all levels of drivers and participants will be acquiring their skills from the best in the business: throughout the whole year Pedro Lamy, Filipe Albuquerque, José Monroy, Tiago Monteiro, Pedro Couceiro and Manuel Gião will be the designated instructors of the courses.

Among the programmes available are the 'Taxi Experiences', where you will have one of the most terrifying experiences of your life as you sit by the side of one of the professional drivers on a manic two lap race, in either a Ferrari Modena 360 or a BMW M3.

If you want to get your hands on a real driving experience, then the 'Driving Experiences' are for you. These consist of four levels of driving courses (Classic, Silver, Gold, Platinum [includes personal training]) with prices ranging from €299 to €899. They are designed to test and improve your car handling with several different exercises.

The 'Dynamic Control' exercise consists of a small circuit delineated with cones. Your main objective is to finish the circuit without touching any cones. It may sound easy, but with parts of the circuit being covered with a special gel to simulate situations of very low grip, your reflexes and grasp of the vehicle are of utmost importance to end this exercise in a good time.

Participants will have to show their control of the vehicle in the 'Drift Control' exercise, where they must perform donuts in the drift pad, in wet conditions, and keep a steady circular trajectory.

The 'Track Level 1/2/3' will be the first actual track experience, where participants will firstly be taken around the track, with the instructor driving, to get to know the track and learn the ideal trajectories. After switching seats, the participant will then drive four, six, eight or ten laps around the track, depending on the course chosen.

Available only in the Silver, Gold and Platinum courses is the 'Head to Head'. In this exercise participants will have a direct confrontation with another learner around a circuit with cones, this consists of one reconnaissance lap and one timed lap.

For the Platinum course only is the 'Pursuit' exercise, where participants will follow the instructor around the track. Over the six laps, the instructor will gradually increase the speed.

As safety always comes first, there will always be a briefing session beforehand to explain what you will be doing, what precautions to take and a theoretical introduction to relevant aspects of the track and how to make the most out of the day in absolute safety.

The list of cars available for the courses are truly impressive as you have cars for all levels of drivers, such as Caterham, Porsche Cayman S, BMW M3, Porsche 911 Carrera 2 S, Porsche Carrera 4 S, Nissan GTR, Porsche GT 3, Ferrari Modena 360 and Porsche GT3 RS.

You can now feel what its like to drive some of the best cars in the world without having to buy one!

Motorbike courses are also available, with the tutoring of Miguel Praia and Eugene Laverty, current pilots for the Parkalgar Honda Racing team.

If you would like to register yourself for a truly unforgettable experience, please call the AIA Racing School on +351 282 405 600 or email: info@autodromodoalgarve.com.
